NO SUCCESS resulted from two search operations today in Montreal. In one police and soldiers encircled a four-block area and conducted fruitless house-by-house searches for the kidnap-killers of Pierre Laporte. A Montreal newspaper quoted a police official as saying that two French-language radio stations knew police plans in advance and broadcast some information. (CP Wirephoto).

50 YEARS OF FAILURE

Aimless Billions Spent on Science

Lack of Guidance Rapped by Senate

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Billions of Canadian dollars were committed in the 1950s to nuclear power programs, jet fighters and ballistic missiles without one meeting of the federal cabinet's chief science policy-making body.

This is an example cited by the Senate science policy committee of past performance under what it describes as Canada's "science policy by accident."

In the first volume of its report tabled Thursday, the committee says the federal government must shed 50 years of failure at molding the national science effort and replace it with a clear, comprehensive policy aimed at economic and social objectives.

Faced with a huge international technological race and with growing social problems at home, politicians and the public can no longer afford to abdicate their responsibilities to make and control science policy, it says.

For example, Canada got into nuclear power and building jet fighters and missiles between 1950 and 1958 without the cabinet committee on scientific and industrial research, the main top-level policy body, ever meeting.

Committee Dissolved in October

Since 1958, the committee had met with growing frequency —once a week this year. The report adds that the cabinet committee was dissolved by the government in October, to make way for setting up new policymaking machinery next year.

The report makes specific citations in discussing costly weapons systems developed in the 1950s, culminating in the elimination of the Avro Arrow program in 1959.

There was the Avro flying saucer, for which no cost is specified, later developed as a subsonic experimental craft under U.S. contract; the abortive Velvet Glove missile costing $24 million; and the CF-100 jet interceptor costing $146 million in federal funds before production.

Top cost, of course, was the $450 million sunk in the Arrow.

In view of the "gap at the top," says the Senate report, it is hard to see how a clear policy could result from the three policy advisory bodies — the National Research Council, the Science Council of Canada and the Economic Council of Canada.

The NRC was created in 1916, the economic council in 1961 and the science council in 1966.

NRC's Effectiveness Weakened

The study says NRC's effectiveness as an advisory agency was weakened seriously when it acquired huge laboratories in the 1930s and 1940s. It then faced a conflict of interest between offering advice and doing its own research.

The science council, it adds, has been working in a political vacuum with minimal impact on policy.

The Senate science policy committee, headed by Senator Maurice Lamontagne (L—Quebec), economist and former cabinet minister, was created in 1967. Its extensive hearings included trips to the U.S. and Europe.

Most of the specific recommendations will appear next year in a second report. One recommendation made by the first report calls for a permanent Senate committee to review major policy issues every five years and to study individual areas or problems when required.

While the 100,000-word report praises achievements and scientists of the last 50 years, it also says "the bulk of the evidence presented to the committee, including what came from the federal government sector, stressed the need for an over-all science policy."

The committee said the organization of science is the core of power in this generation, comparable with ownership of industry in the 19th

'Too Many Research Workers'

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is only three years away from producing nearly twice as many PhD research workers as there are jobs for them, says the Senate science policy committee.

The committee says there is "something fundamentally wrong with the scientific manpower situation in Canada."

"We are apparently producing undesirable surpluses in certain areas and tolerating serious gaps in others that are paralysing important research functions in government."

The report was tabled today.

Reporting on evidence from outside the government, the committee says there is evidence most holders of PhDs in science and engineering will have to find jobs in industry, either in Canada or abroad.

But it also cites evidence that industry sees too few engineers, geologists and geophysicists on the horizon.

INDUSTRY CONCERNED

And the committee says industry is concerned whether the training and attitudes of PhD graduates fits them for working in industry.

"Canadian industrialists are seriously concerned about the nature of Canada's university training."

Kidnapped Envoy Says He's Nervous

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher has sent a letter saying he is tired and nervous in guerrilla captivity and urging the government to accept his captors' demands.

The 57-year-old envoy, seized at gunpoint 11 days ago, made his appeal in a note found in a suburban bar here Wednesday along with the kidnappers.

The guerrillas reiterated their insistence on formal guarantees by the government that 70 political prisoners they want exchanged for the bachelor envoy would be flown to Chile or Algeria.

Britain Bound by 'Obligation' To Make Arms Sale—Heath

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath left little room for doubt Wednesday that Britain is disposed to honor its "obligation" to supply arms to South Africa.

But two points mentioned by Heath at a crowded news conference winding up his quickie visit here for talks with Prime Minister Trudeau suggested that the fateful decision — for the Commonwealth — will not necessarily have to be taken.

One was that South Africa has not yet applied to buy arms from Britain, though it has been several months since Heath's newly-elected government announced it was willing to consider applications.

The other was that Britain's commitment to South Africa under the Simonstown agreement could be dissolved only by mutual consent.

On both points, Heath appeared to leave open the possibility that South Africa itself will provide an out for Britain by not embarrassing it with a request for arms.

Heath visited Ottawa for part of a day on his way to Washington for talks with President Nixon today and Friday.

President Nixon and Heath settled down today to wide-ranging talks on East-West relations, NATO, the Far East and other issues.

At a formal welcoming ceremony at the White House, Heath touched on a key issue of the talks when he assured Nixon there is no incompatibility between Britain's application to join the European Common Market and Anglo-American relations.

On the contrary, he said, if Britain is admitted to the

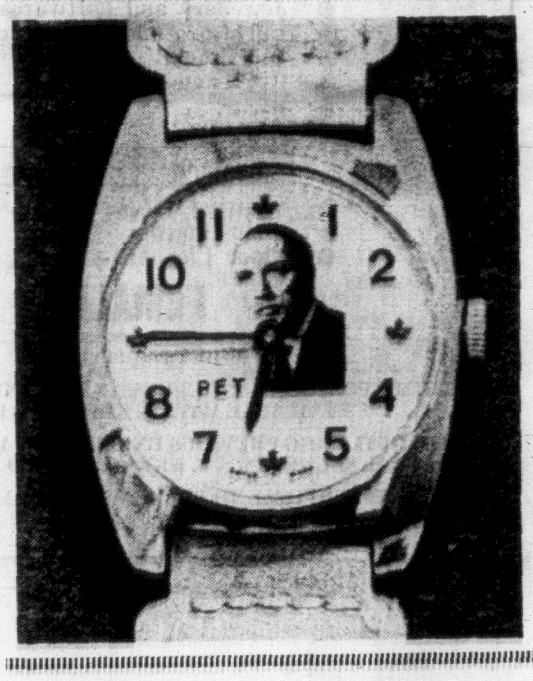
OTTAWA (CP) — Shares for public participation in Telesat Canada, putting up the country's first domestic space communications satellite, will be offered only after the satellite has achieved "successful commercial operation," it was announced today.



AND IT TELLS THE TIME

MONTREAL (CP) — Trudeau wrist watches, on sale in Montreal department stores for two weeks, are "selling splendidly," the Montreal distributor said Wednesday.

The timepiece is "not jazzy but a hell of a lot nicer," than the Spiro Agnew caricature watches sold in the United States, said a spokesman for Clef Canadian Industries.

The watch features a black-and-white photograph by Jean-Pierre Cucuel of the Prime Minister, not a caricature.

The $14.95 Swiss-made watch has red hands and a red maple leaf at each quarter hour.

Some 15,000 watches have been distributed throughout Eastern Canada and the company expects to put them on sale shortly in Western Canada, the spokesman said.

SIX PERSONS DEAD BY OFFICIAL COUNT

From Reuter-AP

WARSAW (CP) — Shipyard and other workers in Gdansk and miners in Silesia were reported on strike today after three days of riots and street fighting in Poland's Baltic ports over sharp price increases. The outbreaks were reported to have left at least six persons dead, by official count.

Other sources said the death toll was at least 12 and more than 150 persons were injured, many of them militiamen-police.

The Polish Communist party newspaper Trybuna Luda admitted for the first time that stiff pre-Christmas price increases in food, fuel and clothing announced last weekend were at the root of the trouble.

The paper, also making the first editorial comment in Poland on the clashes in Gdansk (formerly Danzig), Gdynia and Sopot said some of the workers who battled with militia still were not back at work. The paper urged them to return to their jobs.

The clashes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday left buildings burned out and stores looted, and led to tanks being brought on to the streets and a dusk-to-dawn curfew being clamped on the three coastal cities.

Observers said the Trybuna Luda article indicated that all was not yet well in Gdansk, although earlier Polish reports said calm and order had been restored there and in the neighboring port of Gdynia and the vacation resort of Sopot.

All three cities form an almost unbroken built-up complex stretching for about 15 miles along the Baltic coast, with a total population of more than 600,000.

Ottawa Boosts Soldier Guards

OTTAWA (CP)—The number of soldiers guarding political leaders has been increased in recent days in the national capital, officials disclosed today.

Reasons given was the belief that the Front de Liberation du Quebec might seek a "replacement hostage" for freed James Cross.

Most of the soldier-guards had been withdrawn in the Ottawa area.

But they have been returned to duty and persons who were without any guards for weeks now have them again, at least at night.

Pollution Measure Agreement Reached

WASHINGTON (WP) — House-Senate conferees reached final agreement Wednesday night on a clean air bill imposing an absolute legislative deadline of Jan. 1, 1976, for auto industry production of a virtually pollution-free engine.

The compromise measure, probably the strongest air pollution control bill ever considered by Congress, is expected to reach the House and possibly the Senate floor Friday for quick approval and transmittal to President Nixon.

Senate bill sponsor Edmund S. Muskie (D-Maine) called the measure "a good strong bill."

House commerce committee chairman Harley Staggers (D—W. Va.) called the final provisions "a reasonable compromise."

Under the final provision, the industry must come up with an engine by Jan. 1, 1975 that will reduce emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons by 90 per cent from the maximum 1970 permissible levels. The administrator of the environmental protection agency (EPA) would be empowered to grant a one-year extension, but after that no new cars could be sold that didn't meet the new standards unless Congress extended the deadline.

MONTREAL CITIZENS UNAWARE

Police Help Was Nearby

MONTREAL (CP) — For 30 consecutive nights in November, residents of the west-end Cote des Neiges district were bothered by a noisy prowling gang of tough-looking men.

Already tense because of the kidnap crisis, apartment dwellers heard strangers tramping down usually quiet corridors at 2 a.m., grabbing door handles and trying to force them open.

Burly hobos sat on the front porches of duplexes for as long as two hours. In the middle of the night, men would jump back-yard fences and try to force locks on doors.

Sergeant Andre Querton, in charge of the crime prevention section in the district, said Wednesday that not one citizen reported the incidents to police.

"People are so damned unresponsive, and coldly so, that it's unbelievable," he said. "They did absolutely nothing."

The hobos and prowlers were undercover officers conducting a survey to test residents' response to prowling incidents.

. . . SCIENCE PROBE

century or of the land in feudal times.

It concludes that Canada suffers from the "snobbery of science" stressing basic research to the neglect of the research and development that lead to new technologies and new products.

It attributes this distortion partly to cabinet apathy and partly to the NRC, which it says has never effectively spread the results of its research.

COMPARE WITH U.S.

The committee contrasts this situation with the United States practice of contracting out projects to industry. This strengthened the capacity of private industry to produce new products and develop new technologies.

The major effort in writing in the final report was by Senator Lamontagne, Senator Donald Cameron (Ind-L—Alberta), Senator Andrew Thomson (L—Ontario) and Senator Allister Grosart (PC—Ontario).

It says that in future, a major government responsibility "in this age of the scientific revolution" is to ensure that society gets the maximum benefits from science and technology at minimum cost. That will require policies for such things as health, transportation or agriculture and a coherent over-all policy—all under effective controls.

Much speculation has centred on the prospect that future recommendations will include a minister for science policy with powers to coordinate all government science activities.

The report says that, compared with many western countries, Canada spends a greater share of science funds on research than on technological development, relies more heavily on academics than on industry to do research, performs more research in government laboratories than any other advanced country, finances far less research outside government labs with public funds and favors the academic sector over the industrial in contracting research.

TREASURY HOLDS POWER

Summarizing the way science policy now is made, the committee finds a series of policies for individual sectors, all strongly influenced negatively by treasury board which reviews planned spending.

"The Senate committee regretfully regards this as a science policy by accident," says the report echoing in 1969 testimony of Simon Reisman, then secretary of treasury board and now deputy finance minister.

The committee pays tribute to the honesty and frankness with which government representatives described the situation, pressing for a clear over-all policy and better coordination of the sectors of the scientific community.

"The set of proposals presented to the committee by the government representatives was nothing less than a revolution."

Shadow Mischief

Loans From 1893 Still Being Paid Off

A consolidated loan taken out by the city of Victoria in 1945 includes debts acquired 50 years earlier, and it won't be paid off until 1975.

The $12 million borrowed in debentures at the close of the Second World War was an improvement on a similar debt from 1937 taken out because the city couldn't meet all its old debts.

The effect on taxpayers today is about $630,000 a year, says Jim Bramley, city comptroller.

The very early debts included an education loan in 1893, an exhibition loan in 1894 and a James Bay mud flats reclamation project in 1901.

When it's all paid off in 1975, however, the relief may be only psychological.

Having established over 25 years the annual need for this $630,000, the city does not plan to let it go.

City hall expects to issue more debentures to cover other expenses. But these will be more palatable than the earlier debts. They will be short-term issues that will mature between 1976 and 1978.

To Bramley, this is a far better way to handle the city's finances.

"The city was in pretty bad financial shape when it sold all these debentures in 1945. Now we're in good shape."

CAPE MUDGE EXPERIMENT AGAIN DELAYED

'You Can Color Me Frustrated'

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell today cut loose at the Federal Indian Affairs department for throwing barriers up against a proposed Indian municipality at Cape Mudge on Quadra Island.

"You can color the minister of municipal affairs annoyed and frustrated . . ." Campbell said in blaming "two bit — correct that, high priced — bureaucrats in the Indian Affairs department who have simply been unwilling to accept new direction for self-government of Indian communities."

Sounding much like Indian spokesmen who have been criticizing the federal department for years, Campbell said it appears that some civil servants in Ottawa are more interested in keeping the status quo for bureaucrats.

MONTHS OF DELAY

"This was a proposal that came from the Indian people themselves; Campbell said of the proposed municipality which would have been the first in Canada.

The minister said a letter from federal Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien Wednesday confirmed that there would be "months and months of delay" on the issue for what Campbell termed "unnamed constitutional, technical and legal reasons."

Campbell accused Ottawa of using constitutional arguments at a "whim" to cover up an unwillingness to proceed with a new policy at Cape Mudge.

"In this case apparently the federal government simply says it has total jurisdiction over Indians. If that is the case, we will remember those statements."

Campbell said the federal government had earlier indicated support for the plan to form an Indian municipality. A referendum on the issue had been hoped for by the end of this year prior to delays at the federal level.

About a dozen other B.C. Indian reserves are reported interested in setting up municipalities.

The provincial fund to benefit Indians has spent $748,000 in 19 months since it was set up and has $2.2 million unspent, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell reported today.

The money, consisting of interest earned by the $25 million first citizens' fund, has been made available in 178 separate grants to a variety of Indian organizations.

A dispute with the Union of B.C. Chiefs, resulting in that group refusing a $53,000 grant, has kept some of the money unspent.

The chiefs asked for $200,000 for a communications program but Campbell said too much of the money was destined for salaries and not enough for direct service.

The fund was set up by the provincial government along with other perpetual funds in aid of sports and culture during the 1969 legislative session.

KEY DECISIONS NOT MADE BY CABINET—REPORT

Canada Pushed Into Atomic Age

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Hydro and Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.—and not the federal cabinet—made the key decisions that launched Canada into the expensive nuclear power business, says the Senate science policy committee report.

As a result, Canada jumped into a highly-sophisticated and costly technology without the industrial ability to translate laboratory applications of nuclear energy into power stations.

The committee says it meant years of industry learning as it went along and eventually AECL undertook much of the work itself.

Canadian investment in nuclear power is estimated at about $1 billion. Atomic Energy has one plant, at Douglas Point, Ont., feeding power into Ontario Hydro which has other units under construction at Pickering, near Toronto.

While the Senat committee does not say so, the key period it describes covered the final years of C. D. Howe, the wartime and post-war dynamo of the federal cabinet whose responsibilities included atomic energy.

MAKE DECISION

At Chalk River, Ont., in 1963, AECL and Ontario Hydro officials met and "decided to go ahead with a nuclear power project."

Important decisions such as the type of nuclear reactor—natural uranium fuel, heavy water moderated—were made in the succeeding months by AECL. This was partly because Canadian scientists were experienced in this reactor and partly because it was thought too expensive to build facilities for producing an alternative fuel, enriched uranium.

In retrospect, says the committee in its report tabled Thursday, these considerations may not be as sound as they seemed at the time. It cites arrangements made by other countries to get enriched uranium fuel from the United States and Canada's troubles getting a domestic supply of heavy water.

"The knowhow acquired at Chalk River was greatly overestimated," it adds.

By 1954, it was decided that a demonstration power reactor would be designed and developed by private industry as preparation for building larger commericl plants. Canadian General Electric was picked to do the job.

PUSH AHEAD

But the federal cabinet in June 1958 decided to authorize construction of a bigger, 200-megawatt reactor at Douglas Point. This meant going ahead before the prototype was finished.

"This hasty decision was apparently based on Ontario Hydro's need for power."

But design and development were withdrawn from General Electric's by-now experienced team and given to AECL's nuclear power plant division.

"This other decision was apparently also imposed by Ontario Hydro which did not wish to deal with a private company, that had been granted a monopoly, when the time came to build its own reactors."

The committee says it was wrong to neglect technology and design as was done in the 1950s. It says useful guidance and assistance could have been given AECL by an effective and impartial central machinery for science and technology which had a clear view of the objectives and of the strategy to be used.

. . . STRIKES IN POLAND

The government-controlled Warsaw radio said, however, that life in Gdansk "has returned to normal."

"The population went quietly to work this morning. All city transport is running normally.

"Although the city council set the opening hour for shops at 7, tradesmen voluntarily opened their doors at 6 to enable people to buy food. The streets are almost clear of rubble. Only glass panes in some display windows have not been replaced."

The broadcast did not say whether the 6 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew had been lifted, but the city's two newspapers were publishing on schedule.

SECURITY TIGHT

Tight security was still in effect around Gdansk, Gdynia and Sopot this morning. All flights to the area on the western shore of the Bay of Danzig were suspended and long-distance telephone service had not resumed.

Travellers arriving Wednesday night from Gdansk said the fighting between street crowds and police was dying down, but that a sit-in by workers in factories and shipyards was under way. Miners in Silesia, in southwest Poland, also walked out in sympathy with the Gdansk workers.

As the Polish Communist authorities took stock of the material and political damage wrought by the street clashes, they were also looking cautiously for signs of unrest elsewhere over the price changes.

The adjustments were approved as justified only Monday by Communist party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka. Party economists have made clear the aim is to switch consumption away from scarce foods to consumer durables.

Reliable sources reported dissatisfaction over the increased prices in the Cegielski marine diesel engine works in Poznan in West Poland and in an automobile plant at Zeran, on the outskirts of Warsaw.

But there was no word that this had taken a violent turn as in Gdansk.

Reports said students and some housewives also took part in the Gdansk demonstrations.

Polish television showed a brief film of burned-out automobiles, trolley cars, buses and food delivery trucks in debris-strewn streets.

A Western diplomat who was in Gdansk Monday gave this report of the start of the fighting:

Shipyard workers were marching peacefully in the city Monday afternoon to protest increases averaging 20 per cent in the government price of food, fuel, clothing and other commodities.

Police, seeing they were outnumbered by the demonstrators, panicked and started shooting. This triggered demonstrations all over the city. An angry mob singing the Communist Internationale attacked the party headquarters and also tried to burn down the railway station. Only slight damage was done to the station, but there was widespread arson and looting.

Common Market the United States and all the free world will benefit.

TRUDEAU CONFERS

In Ottawa, Heath and Prime Minister Trudeau in a 1¾-hour private talk, failed to resolve their differences over the arms-to-South Africa issue, according to authoritative sources.

Trudeau was reported to have reiterated his earlier warnings to Heath about the danger to Commonwealth unity a British decision to lift the arms embargo imposed by former prime minister Harold Wilson six years ago would pose.

At his news conference Heath discounted Canadian fears for Commonwealth trade because of Britain's proposed entry into the European Common Market.

He said trade between individual Common Market members and nations outside the community has been increasing, and he expected this trend to continue after Britain joins.

REJECT PROPOSAL

Heath rejected Canada's proposal for an early international conference to reduce tariffs, saying undertakings made at the last such meeting — the Kennedy round — had not yet been fully implemented and that it would be difficult to arrange a new one "at this moment."

Heath stated at least three times that Britain has an obligation, under the agreement which permits it to maintain a base at Simonstown in South Africa, to fill requests for arms from the white supremacist republic.

That had been the Conservatives' stand while they were in opposition in Britain, "and it's still our position."

Sidney Committee Still Talks Pool

The Sidney and North Saanich joint centennial committee has decided to try and cut costs for its proposed $75,000 swimming pool.

The pool referendum failed Saturday in Sidney with a 53.1 per cent majority. Sixty per cent was needed.

"The committee felt Saturday's vote was close enough to try again," Sidney alderman and committee mamber Norma Sealey said Wednesday.

The committee has decided to alter the design of the pool.

RATEPAYER OPINION SOUGHT

Arena Meeting Next Month

A public meeting will be held in Langford-Colwood next month to seek ratepayers' feelings on the next steps for the $750,000 arena.

A referendum on the arena was strongly approved Saturday by Langford and Colwood residents, but Metchosin failed by 14 votes to give it the necessary 60 per cent.

This technically defeated the referendum because the three areas, voting separately but simultaneously, all needed at least 60 per cent.

The Capital Regional District Board was told Wednesday the public meeting will be held Jan. 11. Time and place have not been set.

Colwood director Dick Emery said the purpose of the meeting will be to see if residents want Langford and Colwood to go ahead with the arena or to hold a second referendum.

"We feel the outcome will be to go ahead," he said.

Langford director Earl Pallister said "because of the terrific majority in Langford and Colwood we feel we are compelled to take a second look and this is all we are doing."

In the referendum, Colwood was 85 per cent in favor and Langford 83 per cent. Metchosin was 52 per cent.

Hospital Board Wants Project Talks

The Capital region's hospital board wants to discuss projects in Central Saanich and at Colwood with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

Directors at their meeting Wednesday afternoon approved sending a delegation to explore:

- Speeding progress of the hospital to be built on Mount Newton Crossroad to replace Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney. Plans at the moment call for building a 75-bed extended care unit initially and eventually adding an equal number of acute care beds.

The architects have suggested planning could be made more practical if both phases are dealt with together as there will be a number of facilities to be used by both.

- Examine further plans for extended care beds at St. Mary's Priory in Colwood. Loffmark has suggested the regional hospital board could buy the existing 71-bed unit and the provincial government would then share in development of more beds for chronic patients on the property if a suitable plan can be drawn.

In other business, the board joined Loffmark in authorizing Lady Minto Hospital at Ganges on Salt Spring Island to proceed with working drawings for a 15-bed addition for chronic care patients. Cost limit on the project is $295,000.

Lab-Conceived Embryo Grown by U.K. Scientists

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON (WP) — English scientists have grown a laboratory-conceived embryo until it is mature enough to be returned to a woman's womb.

This research advance — hastening the day of the so-called test tube baby — was described here Wednesday by one of the team of English scientists in the forefront of the new biological revolution.

Dr. Patrick C. Steptoe said that the remaining two obstacles to the successful laboratory conception of a human — possible genetic abnormalities and the placing of the embryo back in the woman's womb — can be easily overcome.

But he declined in a press conference to predict when doctors will actually try to implant an embryo in a woman so it can be born normally nine months later.

Scientists in research centres around the world are attempting the laboratory conception of an embryo — both to allow women suffering from certain types of infertility to bear children and to gain knowledge about genetic deseases.

Until recently, the English team — which is ahead of the other researchers — has been able to fertilize an egg, watch it double from one cell to two, and finally grow to the 16-cell stage. This is still too immature to be implanted in a woman.

Now, Steptoe revealed, the team has grown five embryos with more than 100 cells — to the blastocyst stage which can be returned to the womb where it will fasten itself to the uterine wall.

"We have been able to complete all the developments that normally take place in the oviducts," where the male sperm and the female egg usually meet, said Steptoe, who was here to deliver a lecture Wednesday night.

In England he is collaborating with Dr. Robert G. Edwards of Cambridge University, who he described as a "backbench scientist." Edwards for years has studied the way eggs are fertilized.

Steptoe, who practices at Oldham General Hospital in Lancashire, England, has developed a simple method of obtaining eggs from a woman's womb. He uses a labaroscope — a narrow tube with a telescope eyepiece and light that can be inserted into a woman's abdomen.

Using hormones, the scientists are able to prime the eggs so they are ready to be fertilized when they are removed.

The eggs come from women whose oviducts are damaged in such a way that they cannot conceive a child normally — usually because of a blockage that prevents the egg and sperm from meeting. The sperm is donated by their husbands.

These women will be the first candidates for laboratory-conceived babies.

"We will be able for the first time to give them the opportunity to have a baby," said Steptoe.

Besides that, he said, the work "now allows us to learn many things about the earliest development of human embryos." It is this initial phase of cell division in which many genetic diseases, such as mongolism, start. Finding out what causes the abnormalities might help doctors in preventing them, he said.

TWO ACRES NEAR ST. JOSEPH'S

Board Decides to Buy Land

The Capital region's hospital board voted by a narrow margin Wednesday to proceed immediately with purchase of about two acres of land alongside St. Joseph's Hospital.

The land will be used for expansion of the hospital's acute care facilities although a lack of details led several directors to urge more investigation before purchase talks open.

Whether there will be enough space for a proposed 150-bed unit for chronic patients remains to be seen.

The property involved lies between the hospital and the planned extension of Belleville Street and the regional board would also buy the annex building.

WON'T SELL ALL

The price would be proportionate to the assessed value of $1,587,280 for the 7.1 acres the regional board at one time was to buy but the owners, the Sisters of St. Ann, have more recently refused to sell in total.

There is no precise figure for the amount of land to be bought but if it works out to two acres the cost would approximate $425,000.

A condition of the sale would be gifting of the founding Sisters' equity in the hospital to the Crown. The Sisters have long since indicated they will give their $3 million plus equity to the community but in whose name it will be held has been one of several debates which have delayed expansion plans.

MORE DETAILS

Directors Frances Elford, Edith Gunning, Ken Rainey and Les Passmore led the debate Wednesday for more details before opening the land purchase talks.

But a narrow majority, led by board chairman Hugh Curtis, pressed to keep the momentum of recent developments going by starting purchase talks right away.

For over a year arguments over land title, lease arrangements, road patterns and cost of expansion have delayed any development. Involved at one time or another have been Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, the city of Victoria, the society scheduled to take over operation of the hospital from the Sisters and the region's hospital board.

Christmas Luncheon For Elderly

Some 200 oldtimers from the Marigold area sat down to a Christmas luncheon today provided by the Strawberry Vale Community Club and the Marigold Ladies Group.

Choirs from Marigold and Strawberry Vale elementary schools and a neighborhood orchestra provided music for the event which was held in the Strawberry Vale Community Hall.

Guard Lack Delays Opening

The provincial archives will be opened to the public "momentarily", Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace said Wednesday.

The archives have been on a limited-access basis — to persons known to the archives staff — since moving to the new quarters opposite the provincial museum five months ago.

Apparent cause of the problem is lack of a security guard to man the door. The provincial government is still caught in a staff "freeze" under which only essential employees are replaced when they leave.

Adventure in Borderlines

TWO MAJOR RECOMMENDATIONS which stand out of the half-a-million-word report of the Davey committee on news media deal with the creation of press councils and of a press ownership review board. Both proposals are intended to monitor the press and protect the public; the latter enters upon the hazardous ground of governmental influence over the news.

Legislation dealing with communications — as with many other social functions — cannot be judged only in the context of the government which originates it. What might be merely benevolent supervision under one government could become harsh tyranny under another. The reality of protection for public or individual lies in what is on the law books, not how amiably it may be applied at any one time by any one authority.

In urging a press council to monitor the nation's newspapers, and undertake what might be called an ombudsman function between press and public, the Davey report emphasizes that council members would not include government representatives. It suggests something along the lines of what was done in Britain. The British model of a press council, in existence for some years, strives to exert internal discipline among its members, but the net effect on the press of Britain — whose journalistic quality runs from one extreme to the other — appears to have been negligible.

A watered-down type of council would achieve little; but on the other hand there should not be a damaging infringement of newspapers' independence, which is their great virtue in a democracy. That is not to say that newspapers do not require a critical standard in order to avoid excesses and inferior journalism; but for effective results it should be self-imposed and self-administered by each newspaper. Some will not do it so well as others, but an informed public will know when it is being short-changed.

The proposed press ownership review board would "represent the public interest in future mergers or takeover of publications" and if this were directed toward ensuring Canadian control of so vital a national service as Canadian information media it would serve a valuable purpose. But the main interest of its government-appointed members apparently would be to approve or reject mergers of newspapers, by the criteria of "public interest" and the merger's effects on the editorial character of a newspaper.

That implies governmental powers over the press that are entirely foreign to a democracy. Newspapers which were dependent on a government body, or quasi-government body, for a licence to publish or permission to expand, would be in a perilous position — but even more so, potentially, would be the reading public.

Progress at a Prohibitive Price?

THE IMPRESSION HAS BEEN current that Air Canada planned to purchase four Concorde supersonic transports and that the delivery date would be late 1973. But Donald Jamieson, the minister of transport, has now made it clear that Air Canada's decision to purchase is not firm, and that a final choice would not be made "for some time to come." Further, it transpires that Air Canada and the Department of Transport are in consultation concerning the sonic boom problem and that both intend to contribute to an international research effort dealing with the sonic boom and related problems.

Opposition to the SST is making itself felt in London, Paris and Washington. In the two European cities the minister's involved in the production of the Concorde have deferred, probably until next summer, their decision on the jet's future. In Washington a Senate filibuster on an SST appropriation bill is expected.

Progress should not be progress-at-any-cost. But it is not simply the large price tag or the deafening sonic booms of the SST that cause concern. Further pollution of the atmosphere in the form of water vapor and exhaust gases could lead to increased cloud formation and a subsequent lowering of the earth's atmospheric temperature. Cosmic radiation at extreme altitudes could be injurious to passengers.

The fact is that we do not have enough concrete evidence of the effects on the environment and humanity which these planes will have. In the process of finding out these effects millions of people around the world would apparently be used as laboratory animals. That is not only a commentary on democracy, it is an indictment of an international system which is spurred by the costly acquisition of prestige items. What have the public relations and sales divisions of Boeing, British Aircraft Corporation and Sud Aviation done to our rational faculties?

Transport Minister Jamieson and his colleagues should be commended for their intention to promote international research on a project whose purpose, financing and probable effects raise so many questions.

Headway on a Long Trail

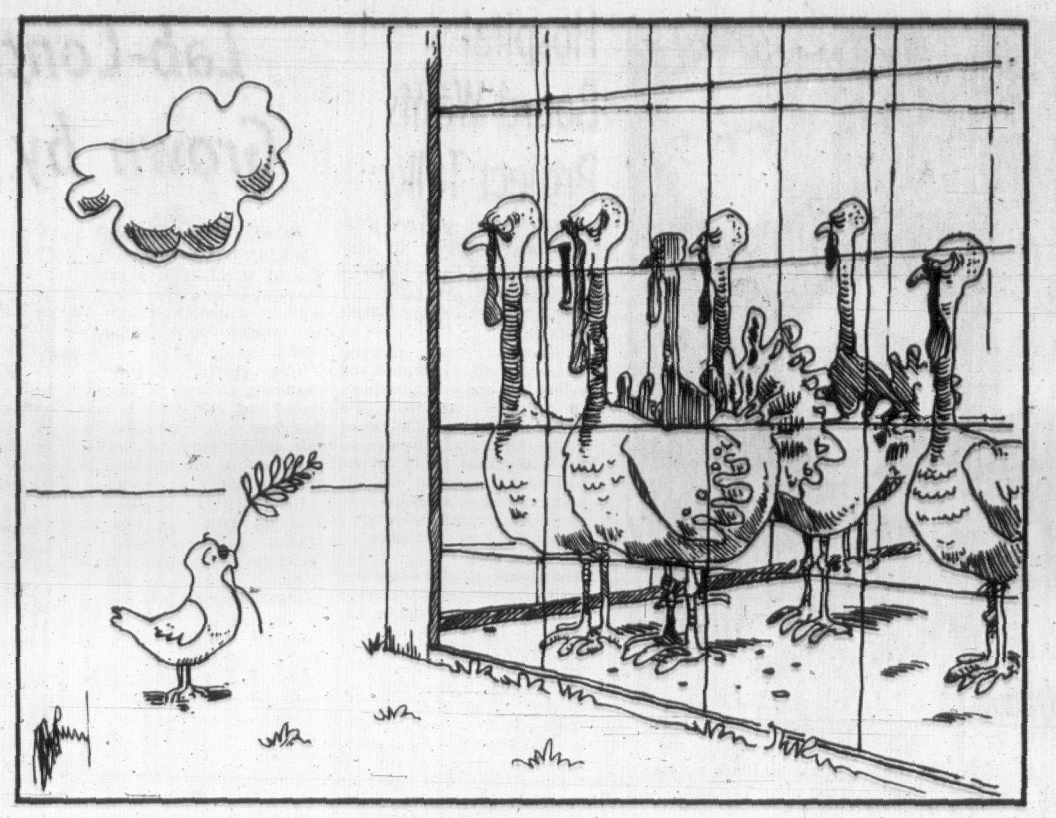
WHAT IS PROBABLY ONE OF the most encouraging and constructive stories associated with Indian activity in Canada during recent years has been told by Chief Dennis Alphonse of the Cowichan Band to the Victoria Times Duncan correspondent, Donna Clements, on the progress his people have made in the last half-decade.

Chief Alphonse details the Indians' advances in handling their own affairs, encouraging the young to improve their education, facilitating development by band members of the considerable resources at their disposal, working toward health improvement. He plans strong efforts to reduce the shocking infant mortality rate, and to offset discrimination in the white labor market by generating jobs for Indians.

This has been an ambitious program. It is far from completed yet, but there have been enough successes to establish a will for greater advance. Housing projects have produced results. Handicraft returns have increased through co-ops.

"Ten years ago," says Chief Alphonse, "we started to get ahead slowly. The past five we have been moving quite rapidly."

The energetic young leader—he is 37—recognizes large problems still ahead. But he has demonstrated not only that Indians are prepared to help Indians, but that they have the ability to do it. Who could better show the way?



"... well ... if it ain't Uncle Tom ...!"

What Alternative?

I noticed with interest the remarks made by a Victoria alderman after his re-election last week, namely Mr. Baird. Among his blabbing was one remark which disturbed me and this was the fact he promised to do his best to close down the Cool Aid program. What alternative does Mr. Baird have to offer?

We would all like to throw up our hands and let the other guy settle the problem, but let's face it, we have a drug problem on our hands, even in Victoria, but at least the young people at Cool Aid are trying to help their fellow man and whether we approve or not they are trying to help, as are the doctors, lawyers, nurses and social workers who give freely of their time at a clinic that is held every week in Victoria. They do not stand around and talk and talk and talk and offer nothing constructive.

If Mr. Baird has attended this clinic and offered his free time, I apologise for my remarks, if not I suggest he attend the clinic. Maybe he will learn something. — Edna Moody, 2861 Craigowan.

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

Should Ontario Export Power or Jobs?

AN application to the National Energy Board by Boise Cascade Corporation (the Ontario Minnesota Pulp and Paper Company) for a licence to export electric power appears innocent enough on its face. The amount involved is not, in absolute terms, particularly large and the company has in fact been exporting power from Northwestern Ontario for many years. Nevertheless, the application has aroused concern among many citizens of the area, including the federal member, John Reid. There is reason for disquiet in the surrounding circumstances; quite enough, it would appear, to justify the energy board in deferring a decision pending very long and dispassionate study.

Western

For many years Canadian governments of both parties refused to sanction further exports of hydro-electric power. This attitude was not a reflection of economic nationalism or anti-Americanism. It merely recognized two highly practical considerations, both underlined by hard experience.

Lifeblood

In the first place, power is not like the ordinary commodities of international commerce. It is the lifeblood of industry. In a competitive position the export of power is the export of a natural advantage; in other words the export of potential jobs.

Secondly, regardless of what may be written in agreements or contracts, power exports are not recoverable. They make possible economic activity, which in turn creates communities. Both are dependent on power. Any attempt to cut it off appears to the recipient community a breach of a moral obligation.

The traditional Canadian attitude was abandoned some years ago for what also appeared a practical reason. This was a judgment, probably too hasty, that nuclear power would rapidly displace hydro-electric power. There was supposed to be a danger, for this reason, that deals delayed or refused might be deals forever lost. Everything that has happened since, however, suggests a very strong and continuing American interest in Canadian power.

This includes the present Boise Cascade application.

Surplus Only

It is a prime responsibility of the National Energy Board to ensure that any exports permitted are surplus to foreseeable Canadian needs.

Since the early 1960s Boise Cascade has had an agreement with Ontario Hydro, which supports its present application as does the Ontario government. Its license to export expires at the end of this year. It has arranged for a temporary extension. Ontario Hydro, with notable generosity, has agreed to supply its established customer at the old rates — at the expense, that is to say, of less deserving customers paying the new rates some 8½ to 9 per cent higher.

But the main point to be noticed is that the trans-border applicant is seeking more than a renewal of the old deal. It wants approval of exports increasing over the decade from 210,240,000 kilowatt hours to 324,120,000 kilowatt hours, plus access to standby power of 87,600,000 kilowatt hours. Thus the increment, in terms of firm power, is approximately 54 per cent.

In the hearings to date Boise Cascade has explained that about one-third of this will be required at its International Falls plant for improvements and normal growth. The board should interest itself in the further requirement. If additional developments are in the wind, will they be at the expense of development and jobs on the Canadian side of the border? Is there any relation between the company's plans for the use of this electric power and a recently approved deal for export of natural gas, with Inter City Gas Company Ltd. as supplier?

Boise Cascade needs more than power: It also needs wood. It formerly enjoyed cutting rights in an area now reserved as Voyageur National Park. It has replaced these by purchase from Domtar (Jim Matthew Ltd.) of rights in Quetico Wilderness Park on the Canadian side. The violation of this sanctuary has provoked a storm in Ontario and may develop into a major political issue.

The Ontario government has a direct interest in these developments because it has induced Boise Cascade through loans totalling $1.5 million (one third forgiveable) and an access road to the cutting resources, to build a kraft plant at Fort Frances.

Leaving aside the matter of wilderness desecration, there might be a case in economic terms for these many-sided arrangements if it could be clearly demonstrated that Northwestern Ontario enjoys a surplus of power resources beyond its prospective needs for some reasonable period. Is this the situation?

Certainly there is no immediate shortage in the region and there is talk of future developments in northern Ontario. The board, no doubt, will wish to be shown that such power is more than a gleam in Hydro's eye. What are the costs of the prospective power and how do they compare with the cost of the power which it is now proposed to alienate?

Exhaustive inquiries of this sort, while understandably frustrating to the applicant and its friends in government (and Hydro) are necessary because development takes time (and, of course, capital) and it is important in the interval to safeguard the interests of the people directly concerned.

Is the area in surplus now? If it is not, the case for rising commitments would seem most dubious. Some present concern arises from a statement attributed about a year ago to a Hydro spokesman that Northwestern Ontario is becoming a net importer of power. If this is so a deal, suspect for other reasons, would appear a reckless gamble with the future that ought not to be tolerated.

FROM WASHINGTON — By TIM TRAYNOR

Canadian Issues Raised in U.S. Study

CANADA has entered the picture in several different ways as U.S. leaders have publicly addressed themselves to the nation's economic problems in recent days. President Nixon's announcement of steps to stimulate the inflow of Canadian oil has been followed up by Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur Burns, who advocated a further loosening of oil restrictions and illustrated comments on U.S. inflation by reviewing Canada's troubled economic pattern of recent years. The Canadian points came in the course of speeches by the president and Mr. Burns, which together add up to a major economic move keyed to the planned swing to re-expansion after serveral years of belt tightening.

Traynor

Restraint Threatened

In the course of his New York speech calling for across the board restraint in industry, President Nixon threatened direct restraining action in federal construction projects and expressed hope that steps to increase oil production and imports would undercut recent oil and gasoline price increases. These points were made, the president said, in accordance with the administration objective of moving the economy, "up to its full potential of growth and employment while continuing to reduce inflation."

Mr. Burns, who oversees the formation of monetary policy independently of the president, came out in a Los Angeles speech with a significantly stronger formulation of the lines of thought developed by the president, who had stopped short of endorsing a systematic policy of wage-price restraint, and who had stressed his basic faith in the ability of classic American free enterprise to reconcile nearly full employment with price stability.

Mr. Burns asserted that more government action — ranging from the establishment of a wage-price review board with limited powers, to further stimulation of oil imports — would be necessary to meet what added up to a "new problem" — the persistence of wage-linked inflation in the face of a slowing of the economy and a consequent rise in unemployment.

This pattern was now plainly evident in the U.S. at a time when, according to the administration's disinflationary program, economic stagnation and unemployment should be forcing moderation of wage claims. (President Nixon acknowledged this, asserting that "The inflation psychology was more powerful than anyone knew," and citing this as a "a critical moment" for the exercise of restraint by business and labor.) To underline his point, Mr. Burns pointed to Canada where it had been found that: "Inflationary wage settlements may continue for extended periods even in the face of rising unemployment."

Canadian unemployment had been rising since 1966, but this had failed to weaken wage advances, which this year were running between eight and nine per cent despite an unemployment rate above six and one-half per cent. In the face of such experience, Mr. Burns was emphatic in focussing on expansion controlled so as to allow the simultaneous reduction of unemployment and abatement, or at least containment, of inflation. (Mr. Burns did not specifically take account of the federal government's campaign to establish wage-price guidlines, but the tone of his suggestions for a board to monitor—without compulsory restraining powers — wage and price increases, was in marked contrast to that of the Canadian government in its recent moves to counter unemployment while de-emphasizing government wage-price guidance.)

Satisfaction on Oil

Apart from the broader questions, Canada has obvious reason for satisfaction with developments relating to oil exports — a subject beshrouded by controversy since the U.S. imposed formal quota limitations last spring. It now seems clear that anti-inflationary considerations played an important part in the agreement — reached at the recent U.S.-Canadian ministerial meeting in Ottawa — forshadowing an eventual opening of the U.S. market to Canadian oil and an easing of restrictions so as to enable more utilization of existing pipeline capacity during 1971. U.S. sources make clear that the action announced by the president, which will allow U.S. refiners to import Canadian oil in place of overseas oil previously authorized for import, is in accordance with the Ottawa agreement, as is a proposed lessening of the formal quota on Canadian imports east of the Rockies.

It is not clear as yet whether the moves already announced by the U.S. will have the effect of boosting Canadian exports to the capacity of the existing pipelines. (About 625,000 barrels a day east of the Rockies compared with the quota level of 395,000 barrels a day). Whether further measures will be needed will only be clear when refineries have had time to act. It should perhaps be noted that the quota has not been entirely dismantled and that the bolstering of Canadian imports is in part dependent on an exceptional market situation, as the result of which Canadian oil is more attractive than overseas oil.

Progress

That said, it is apparent that real progress is being made towards the opening of the American market, and this in a context which bears little relation to the heated rhetoric about a U.S. pressure play to force Canada into an agreement to share energy resources generally. The large sale of natural gas to the U.S. early in the fall was concluded as an independent transaction with specific, balancing benefits to both countries. The only explicit condition attached to the oil agreement was the somewhat non-specific Canadian commitment to try to meet the U.S. concern about securing of Eastern Canadian oil supplies, which are derived from overseas, and which the U.S. feels could be disrupted in a crisis, creating a drag on the U.S.

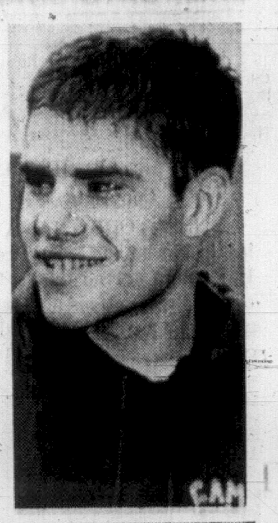
Why Students Don't Care About Sport

By BRUCE KIDD
Canadian Dimension

Dissatisfaction with school athletic programs is becoming more widespread, as evidenced by a discussion this week by members of the Greater Victoria School Board.

Criticism of the excessive emphasis placed on competition is voiced here by Bruce Kidd, one of Canada's outstanding athletes of the last decade. Kidd was a gold medal winner at the 1962 British Commonwealth Games in Australia in the 5,000 metres at the age of 19.



What was most revealing about McGill's recent decision to abolish intercollegiate sports—primarily, it seems, to enable the university to exploit the real estate under Molson Stadium—was the general student apathy which greeted it.

Unlike their counterparts of an earlier age—those students of the '40s, '50s, and early '60s for whom sport was the chief diversion and who loudly condemned any cutback decision—today's students care very little about sports.

This general indifference is not unique to McGill. All across the country, fewer and fewer students are participating in sport of any kind.

Despite growing enrolments, universities are getting fewer participants in the once-popular recreational intramural programs.

High schools that once dominated inter-scholastic sport are now having great difficulty finding enough players to field a team.

I think that students have become apathetic and even hostile to sport largely because its image personifies so many of the beliefs they oppose.

Sport is usually equated with competition, for example, and there is a general revolt among young people today against all competitive aspects of modern living.

Competition not only produces the best athlete at the expense of opportunities for everyone else, but it implies the psychological necessity of treating the opposition as the enemy.

In the physical education class, the most aggressive are held up as an example to the rest of the class while the less able are ridiculed.

If the school system in general forces students to compete for externally imposed goals, then physical education is the epitome of the system.

In commercialized professional sport, athletes are systematically dehumanized by competition.

Commercial sport's ethic of "win at all cost" means subjecting oneself to an authoritarian coach, taking drugs like anabolic steroids and amphetamines to improve performance, competing with such ferocity that fighting results, and allowing one's life to be owned by an organization.

The image of sport also suffers among young people because of its unnecessary discipline and puritanism.

Canadian sport has never broken its long association with military strictness. (Prior to the Second World War, most physical education classes in the country were taught by instructors loaned to the schools by the armed forces.)

Uniform inspection is a regular feature of many Canadian physical education classes and students are still penalized for not wearing the "proper" uniform. In many schools it is the physical education teacher who "persuades" —often by the threat of force—male students to cut their hair.

Although athletic and physical education departments in Canadian universities and high schools haven't been active in the formation of anti-student-protest "Goon Squads" as their U.S. counterparts have been, they generally oppose the liberalizing movements of the age and use whatever platforms to which they have access to denounce them.

Long Association With Military Strictness

Given these tendencies—mindless authoritarianism and competitive aggressiveness—it should not be surprising so many young Canadians are dropping out of sport.

The young in Canada are generally humane, hedonistic, and desirous of directing their own self-development themselves.

If sport is simply a means of buttressing the ego of a coach or institution or another version of the S-and-M trip (Sadism and masochism), then who needs it?

Can sport in the 1970s be relevant to the young adult? I believe it can be if an attempt is made.

Sport does not have to be so exclusively competitive that all but the most skilled must be discouraged from participating.

In Europe and Australia, for example, there are as many levels of competition as there are participants who want to play.

Competition is still goal-oriented, but the goal is to have fun and make a good individual and team effort.

Sport doesn't have to be unconditionally aggressive either. Anyone who has been active well knows that man vs. man is but one form of sports conflict: the athlete must compete against himself and the environment and these common struggles outweigh the interpersonal struggle almost every time.

Only in commercial sport where there is a financial incentive to exploit personal vindictiveness is physical and psychological violence common.

In short, sport as "play", undertaken purely for emjoyment and self-directed self-fulfillment, conducted under rules determined and honored by the participants themselves, can be rewarding for everyone.

If "sport as play" is to have any real meaning in the school, radical changes are necessary. Students must begin to select their own fitness activities from a wide range of options, and in doing so, must choose their own learning objectives, participate in their own evaluation, and select their own coaches and instructors.

The school facilities and equipment must become available in the evenings and on weekends to all who want to play, no matter how informally (at present, schools are invariably locked at these times).

All but the Skilled Are Discouraged From Taking Part

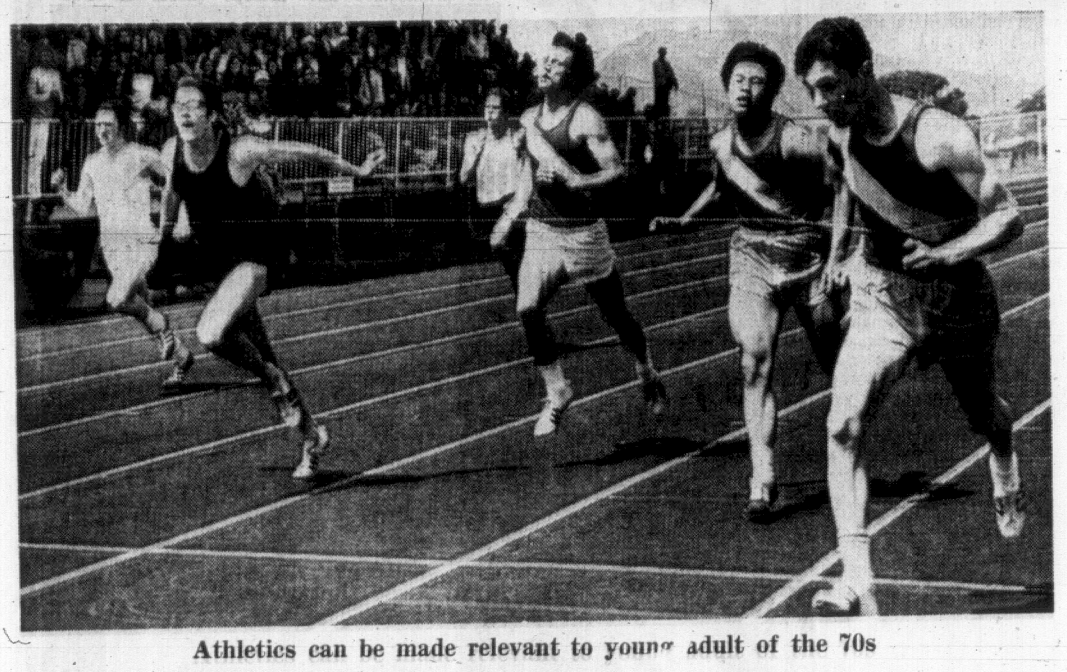
Schools should encourage more outdoor activities — such as hikes and canoe trips — away from the school.

Such changes will never occur until the students themselves organize to push for their acceptance.

It will not be an easy struggle, for the surrounding environment is unlikely to become supportive: The commercial sports interests that dominate Canadian sport will continue to publicize "sport as gladiatorial combat" and the general lack of fitness facilities and resources in Canada will slow the growth of adult sports clubs in the community (there is no hope for support from "little-league" groups in the community, which seem to be preoccupied with developing pre-adolescent gladiators).

But the struggle can be won in individual schools, as successful efforts at a number of U.S. schools and campuses have shown.

Although the issues and strategies will depend upon local conditions, the principle should always be the same: students (and community sportsmen too) should participate in the decisions that affect sport in the school.



Athletics can be made relevant to young adult of the 70s

Europeans Pooh-Pooh Canadian Trade Fears

By JOHN MIKA

(Times Ottawa correspondent Mika accompanied the Canadian delegation earlier this month to the annual NATO meeting in Brussels. In this article, the first of two, he discusses this country's concern over future international trade patterns.)

First of Two

BRUSSELS—Europeans show less apprehension than Canadians that a disastrous trade war may break out between the Common Market and the U.S.

That's the impression left by responses to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's surprise presentation to the annual NATO meeting here this month in which he made dire warnings that a trade war would seriously damage the economic underpinnings of the Atlantic Alliance.

Outside the secret sessions, he assiduously trumpeted the same message to newsmen and added Canada was concerned because she would be forced to choose between economic union with the U.S. or being caught in the tariff crossfire.

Most NATO delegations apparently shrugged off the suggestion of a present danger and treated his speech as special pleading, although Secretary-General Manlio Brosio personally agreed to have his staff survey the situation for an internal NATO report next year.

But at the Common Market headquarters, an EEC spokesman in an interview downgraded the danger of polarization while recognizing the possibility.

He said if the protectionist Mills bill passes the U.S. Congress, it would halt efforts to liberalize trade but would not necessarily touch off a full-scale trade war.

"There would just be the absence of further advance, through a second Kennedy Round for instance, and retaliatory measures would not necessarily proliferate. I think the EEC would react to specific U.S. initiatives rather than become protectionist.

"We do not want to divide the world into trading blocs. We want freer trade because, to be practical, protectionism would just cost us too much.

•

"In effect, the U.S. would be opting out of a trade system if it adopts the Mills bill but there are ways of closing off its worst effects," he said.

Such selective responses by the EEC, instead of massive retaliation, might even give Canada some spin-off benefits.

"For instance, the U.S. exports a large quantity of soybeans to us and if we put a tax on their soybean, oil and fats exports it might open up some market at least for Canadian oils and fats.

"So everything depends on the precise event and responses but, of course, the great danger in any trade confrontation such as the Mills bill is that of escalation getting out of hand.

"If that should happen, then Canada could be severely mauled and about all it could do is pray."

The spokesman said Europe doesn't care whether Canada and U.S. create their own free trade area in North America because continentalism "is entirely your own business and doesn't make much difference to us.

"We have no particular desire to drive Canada into the arms of the U.S. but, after all, Canada has been doing that to herself, hasn't she," he observed with a sudden laugh.

In the event of polarization, there is virtually no chance that Canada could obtain associate status in the EEC even after British entry, as some African countries have done, but a specific trading arrangement on some items might be possible,' he said.

The EEC is outward-looking and even now is trying to negotiate a non-preferential trade agreement with Japan "because only 3 per cent of our total trade is with Japan and we have to improve that."

•

Past performance demonstrates the EEC's desire for freer trade everywhere, the spokesman said.

The Common Market has wiped out tariffs on all but 40 per cent of its imports and during the Kennedy Round reduced the remaining imposts to an average 7 per cent, 50 per cent lower than Britain's average.

Despite Canadian fears that cuts in the military contribution to NATO may bring a trade backlash from Common Market members, the spokesman said the main resentment felt in Europe is caused by Canadian reluctance to slash tariffs.

"In the Kennedy Round, Canada just sat back and let the others do the dealing and tariff cutting. You benefitted a great deal by that round and the percentage of your non-agricultural exports is rising rapidly."

So it's hard for Europeans to understand the complaints from Canada and the U.S. that preferential tariff agreements given various African states by the EEC as assistance to their developing economies is a violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Millions for Monsters

By RUSSELL BAKER

News that the always troublesome Doctor Frankenstein had taken an abandoned castle somewhere in the United States and renewed his attempts to produce a monster capable of walking at twice the speed of sound was largely ignored by the public at first.

Even the administration's first request for funds — a request for $125 million for a feasibility study to be conducted by the Frankenstein Monster Corporation — raised few eyebrows when it passed Congress. The request was so small, as these things go in Washington, that it was granted without debate after someone explained that the Russians were far ahead of the U.S. in monster research.

Gathering about him one of the most highly sophisticated teams ever assembled in a run-down castle, Dr. Frankenstein was able to install the computers, settle the union contracts and cultivate the senators essential to the success of his project in less than two years. And all this despite an almost constant series of thunderstorms raging about the plant.

With his third appropriation, of $87.3 million, Dr. Frankenstein took what is known in Washington as "a quantum jump" ahead. He completed purchasing blueprint paper. The next year he began to draw up budget requests for designing a prototype.

In the following year, with another $90 million, he completed the design. It called for a biped to be enclosed in an ill-fitting suit of men's clothes.

Except for electrical fittings at the neck and skull, the prototype design could have passed as an oafish human. In fact, it bore a startling resemblance to the late Boris Karloff, and for this reason was designated the XBK.

There was great public debate about the desirability of building the XBK. To resolve it, the president appointed a special presidential commission with instructions to study all aspects of the issue and recommend a go-ahead on construction.

Armed with this expert opinion, the president asked Congress to vote $190 million so that the Frankenstein Monster Corporation could proceed.

★ ★ ★

There were the usual crank objections. Some said it made no sense for the U.S. to put billions into monsters when the Long Island Railroad still couldn't find New York City half the time. Others said the U.S. was already amply endowed with monsters and that building one that looked like Boris Karloff and moved at twice the speed of sound would be excessively indulgent.

"Don't monsters already go fast enough?" men without vision asked. "Why do we need a new one that goes at twice the speed of sound?"

The obvious explanation that it would be a disgrace to the U.S. to have a monster that would have to hide out in old windmills because it was not fast enough to outrun the many irate townspeople it would inevitably encounter in its work — failed to satisfy the captious.

Nevertheless, Dr. Frankenstein pressed on. His abandoned castle, now extended and expanded so widely that it covered nearly one-eighth the territory of the politically powerful state of Massagravy, was employing more than 35,000 men and had become the main economic prop of an important segment of the nation.

Among its workers were many men with skills so highly specialized that they would have been unemployable had there been no federally financed project for putting electrodes on monsters' necks or designing clothes that didn't fit.

Well, we all know what happened. One day, to everyone's surprise, the Senate astonished itself by refusing to vote more money for the XBK. Somebody had pointed out, at one of those rare moments when a majority of the Senate's members were awake, that when you got right down to it, all you were doing when you built a better monster was making life more monstrous.

Naturally, the president was angry. If the Senate didn't come across with the money, he said, all the millions the project started would be "wasted." What's more, he said, it would deal the American monster industry a terrible blow for years to come, and relegate the U.S. to second place in monsters.

★ ★ ★

Other nations, including Russia, had already gone ahead with monsters, he noted. This meant that monsters were inevitably going to be built, whether the U.S. built one or not. What would become of U.S. prestige, he asked, if it did not have the most obnoxious and terrifying monster that human genius could create?

He said the U.S. had to have a monster to avoid crushing economic depression in Massagravy and other monster-oriented segments of the nation.

Dr. Frankenstein was optimistic. Privately, he told friends not to worry. "They cannot kill the monster as easily as the Senate thinks," he said. "Remember, after 'Frankenstein' came 'Return of Frankenstein,' 'Bride of Frankenstein,' 'Son' of Frankenstein' and so on. 'Frankenstein Breaks the Sound Barrier' is inescapable."

EMERGING SUPERSTATE . . . IN THE LAND OF THE RISING SUN

U.S., Russia and Japan: Alliance of the Century

By HERMAN KAHN

Copyright 1970, Hudson Institute

NEW YORK (NANA) — Following their meeting in November 1969, President Nixon and Premier Isako Sato agreed that it was in the mutual interest of the two nations to continue working closely together in an effort to stabilize and develop the Pacific area.

Many have interpreted the agreement as a shifting of responsibility from the United States to Japan. On the American side, a rising concern with domestic needs and disillusion with overseas efforts at peace-keeping has combined with an awareness of Japan's wealth and power and produced a desire for greater Japanese involvement in the security and the economic development of East Asia.

On the Japanese side, a new sense of confidence stemming from economic power and enhanced world standing has produced the desire for a more autonomous policy and, in a less polarized world, a more influential role.

Further, the growth of the Japanese economy has had an inevitable effect on certain sectors of the American economy. In the 1960s, for example, the United States had quite a flourishing industry in the manufacture of pneumatic tapes for various types of entertainment systems.

Much the same was also true for the manufacture of many kinds of radios. However, both these industries, with some important exceptions, are now largely based in the Far East and usually, but not always, under Japanese control or management.

In the next two decades, certain political and security goals will continue to bind together Japan and the United States. The friendship of each is likely to continue to be the other's single greatest concern in its Pacific policy. But autonomy and independent policy — which Americans profess to want for Japan — gain meaning and conviction as they are exercised away from, or against, U.S. policy.

Real partnership and equality may be even more difficult to achieve between the United States and Japan than between the United States and Western Europe. Unless and until the Japanese go into a major nuclear armament program, neither side will be able to forget that Japan owes a good deal of its strength and safety to U.S. power.

Yet the areas of shared interests and values that tie the United States and Japan together are sufficiently pervasive to provide the basis for an alliance that should continue to serve both parties well — at least for the next decade or two, and perhaps indefinitely. Indeed, I would be willing to say that it is now obvious that the United States has opted for an arrangement by which American might and Japanese economic power will be combined to rule the Pacific area.

Another set of major issues revolves around the attitude and intentions of the Soviets. Japan's trade with Russia in 1969 was estimated at $703 million and it is expected to rise to $720 million in 1970. The growth of trade, however, can perhaps be better appreciated by the fact that between 1957 and 1968 trade increased by more than 30 times.

The only significant agreement reached by the Japanese-Soviet Joint Economic Committee prior to 1970 was for Japan's importation of eight million cubic metres of lumber over a five-year period beginning in 1969, in return for $150 million worth of machinery, facilities and consumer goods needed for the development of the Soviet's forest resources.

It would be very natural for the Japanese to think in terms of an American-Japanese-Soviet equilibrium through which the two-way cold war detente may become a triangular entente. Thus, some Japanese currently envisage a Soviet component gradually being added to the present Japanese-American alliance to form a somewhat looser but more comprehensive arrangement.

Such a future would probably be characterized by fairly intense Japanese friction with China, but the Japanese might well be willing to pay that price. In fact, the price might still be compatible with a good deal of trade with China.

The picture this presents — of a United States and a Soviet Union relatively distant from each other over most issues but still able to include some arms control agreements — should both encourage the Japanese to take a major role in stabilizing Pacific Asia and, in particular, to act as a restraint on the Chinese.

All of this could be combined with a sense of separateness and apartness. That is, the Japanese might well feel that neither Western democracy nor Soviet communism provided any more important answers to the basic issues of Japanese society than did those of any other Asian or European society.

As far as a reaction to potential Chinese challenges is concerned, the Japanese could well adopt the attitude that they might be willing to help either the Soviets or the Americans in a very junior capacity but that the bulk of the effort would have to be borne by either the United States or the Soviet Union.

It is not likely that the Chinese will be able to exploit this attitude of restraint on the part of the Japanese, since presumably the Americans and the Soviets would indeed feel compelled to act first.

It would only be because of complete abdication of responsibility by the United States — and possibly the Soviet Union — that one could envisage the Japanese being forced to take the initiative to preserve stability. Such an initiative presumably would be accompanied by a massive rearmament program; indeed, there would then be every reason for a massive rearmament by the Japanese.

★ ★ ★

It is even conceivable that this rather curious bloc of three superpowers could develop some really high levels of co-operation and co-ordination, the Soviets, the Japanese, and the Americans generally acting together on almost all issues affecting the Pacific Basin while remaining independent or even competitive in the rest of the world.

Even though the unity of the three superpowers was incomplete and even weak, it would almost certainly force at least a weak co-ordination between the Europeans and Chinese.

They might not only trade intensely with each other but also act in other ways as a generally passively co-operating yet countervailing power to what, they would judge, would otherwise almost surely be a U.S.-Soviet-Japanese hegemony over the world.

Next: Special Problems and Issues.

This is the fifth article of a seven-part series dealing with Japan's rise as a super power. Excerpted from "The Emerging Japanese Super States: Challenge and Response," by Herman Kahn, published by Prentice-Hall.

'ONLY 1 THING WORSE THAN WOMAN DRIVER'

MANCELONA, Mich. (UPI) — The operators of Schuss Mountain Ski Resort will not let women drive snowmobiles because "there's only one thing worse than a woman driver and that's a woman snowmobiler."

"Whenever a girl rents a snowmobile, we expect trouble," Daniel R. Iannotti, president of the resort, said, adding women force other snowmobiles off trails or into trees by going in the wrong direction or turning improperly.

Taxi Driver's Tip Leads to Kidnappers

MONTREAL (CP) — A co-operative taxi driver led police to an east-end address Wednesday where they arrested two persons in connection with the abduction earlier in the day of an 11-months-old baby.

Police said they received a call from the taxi driver who said he had taken a nervous, suspicious couple and an infant to the east-end address. They arrested a woman and an armed man and returned the unharmed infant to its mother, Mrs. Jacques Tessier.

Mrs. Tessier told police that the abduction took place about 11 a.m. when a man identifying himself as an inspector rang her doorbell.

She said he lunged at her with a chloroformed handkerchief but she escaped with her five-year-old child through the back door to a neighbor's home. She said she did not have time to rescue the infant from the crib.

They Like the Name Toad Suck Ferry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Toad Suck Ferry Lock and Dam is apparently to be an official name because the House of Representatives public works committee approved Tuesday a bill which says so.

It's in Arkansas and is one of the navigation locks and dams on the nearly completed Arkansas River navigation project.

It's an old and recognized place name in Arkansas. Until recently the ferry operated between Faulkner and Perry counties.

Knowledgeable Arkansas people give this historical-folklore account of the name.

Many years ago there was a tavern near the ferry landing. It was a slow ferry and people waiting for a ride would go to the tavern to kill time. Naturally while in the tavern they would drink beer or ale or whisky or whatever.

And, so the story goes, they would "suck up booze until they swole up like toads."

So it became the Toad Suck Ferry.

A variation of this is that in times of drought toads would go to the river bed and try to suck water from crawdad holes. Thus the tavern patrons would similarly suck booze.

Aides in the office of Representative Wilbur Mills (Dem. Ark.), who introduced the bill to name this and other features of the project, said residents of the area were insistent on the old name being retained, now that the feery has been replaced by a bridge.

France's Bretons in Long Struggle for Rights

By BODNEY ANGOVE

ST. BRIEUC, France (AP) — They call themselves "France's niggers" and they are fighting for what they regard as their rights, sometimes with petitions, sometimes with bombs. The longer they struggle, the farther toward the political left they seem to lean.

These are the Brittany autonomists, a catch-all term for members of a dozen organizations seeking a better deal for a culturally different people.

The Bretons are descendants of the ancient Celts who held the northwest tip of France-Brittany or Breizh in Breton Celtic—as an independent entity until the 16th century. Under French domination, their culture and seafaring tradition have faded.

Being Breton is something different, they say.

"Our logic is more imaginative, intuitive, while the Latins are Cartesian—narrow," says one non-activist sympathizer. "We kid and rib each other all the time.

"The Latins can't stand that."

WANT COMMON CAUSE

The Bretons call on the equally Celtic Welsh, Cornish, Irish, Scottish and Spanish Galacians to make common cause as blood brothers. They say they will link arms with minority movements in France, the Basques in the southwest and the Alsatians in the east.

"We lost our independence with the Treaty of 1532, but the French are laying siege to Vannes, so there was pressure," explains Lucien Raoul, secretary-general of the Action Committee for a New Status for Brittany.

"The treaty left us some autonomy, and this was pretty well respected until 1789, the French Revolution, when the nobility of Brittany—it didn't have anything to do with the Bretons—revolted against the new revolutionary government.

"Then Napoleon finished it off. We've been somewhat of a colony ever since."

Isolated geographically, the Bretons saw little of France until the First World War when they were drafted into the army. By percentage, Brittany lost more heavily than any other region, and the activists stress this.

WERE RIGHT WING

Up to and during the Second World War, the Breton autonomists were right-wingers. They were told by the invading Germans:

"We're all Celts together. We'll liberate you from Paris." Those who fell for this line were prosecuted later as collaborators.

The post-war recovery reached Brittany slowly, and its youth still trekked to the cities for jobs. While Bretons now hold many positions in business, the bulk became servants and soldiers.

New autonomist organizations have sprung up. Only one, Bretagne Action, is on the right wing.

Between the extremes are about 10 organizations, some working within the system, some clandestine, and some interested only in such things as teaching of the Breton language.

Militant groups such as the Brittany Liberation Front and the underground Republican Army of Brittany have been lying low since 56 arrests last year following a series of explosions.

The width and depth of public support are difficult to estimate. While practically all Bretons believe the government should help them economically, it appears far fewer are willing to risk being activists.

"They don't like us in Paris," commented a cafe owner in a western tip of Brittany, "but we don't want any activists around here."

"They would only bring trouble."

TURNER PLANS PROBE OF 'DRUG-PLANTING'

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner told the Commons Wednesday he would investigate a charge that the RCMP co-operated with Moose Jaw, Sask., police who "planted" drugs in a house.

He was replying to John Skoberg (NDP-Moose Jaw), who said the Moose Jaw CBC television station reported that city police had carried out the operation and that "the RCMP were a party to this investigation."

Skoberg said the TV station had placed a tape recorder on the man "being asked to plant the drug" and asked Turner to inspect the tape for evidence of the incident.

Turner said he would not accept the substance of the question but would "look into it to see whether it merits a report to the house."

Veterans Plan Pro-Franco Rally

MADRID (Reuter) — Right-wing patriots planned a pro-Franco rally here today as a new delay in announcing verdicts in the trial of 16 Basque nationalists kept tension in Spain at fever pitch.

Amid reports from Burgos in north Spain that five army judges already have decided to hand down at least two death sentences in the trial, Spanish former servicemen scheduled an afternoon rally in central Madrid to protest foreign interference.

The veterans—including old-style Falangist civil war survivors—received government approval and support to stage their rally.

The staging point is the Plaza Del Priente, only yards from the palace where Head of State Francisco Franco was scheduled to receive foreign ambassadors for a routine meeting today.

At noon—an hour before the rally—a mass was to be held in a Madrid church in memory of Meliton Manzanas, the secret police chief of San Sebastian who was murdered in 1968.

DEMAND DEATH

Death sentences were demanded by the prosecutor for six of the 16 accused—who have declared themselves to be Marxist-Leninist underground fighters of the small Basque revolutionary movement ETA—on charges of being involved in the Manzanas murder.

The five-man panel of army judges were reported to be still meeting formally in closed session at Burgos, but informed sources said they already have decided to pass down at least two death sentences.

The sentences now are expected to be made public Friday when the cabinet has its regular fortnightly session.

Meanwhile, there was still no word on kidnapped West German Consul Eugen Beihl, seized by Basque guerrillas 16 days ago.

The fate of the 59-year-old consul apparently hinges on that of the 16 Basques, and informed sources said the West German embassy in Madrid is anxious about the prospect of further time elpasing before the verdicts.

Beihl's kidnappers might lose their nerve if the waiting period continues, the sources added.

Cornat

Cornat Industries Ltd., in its first annual report, covering the year ended Oct. 31, showed a net profit of $561,321, equal to 19 cents a share.

Cornat was formed in 1969 to provide a means by which shareholders of Coronation Credit Corp. Ltd. could diversify their enterprise.

Of Cornat's $561,321 net profit $275,574 was provided by the mortgage division (Coronation), $231,287 by the transportation and storage division, $7,122 by sundry equity investments and $47,338 by other enterprises.

Operating revenues totalled $14 million of which the mortgage division provided $2.87 million, transportation and storage $10.79 million, sundry equity intestments $193,724 and other $222,788.

Williams Creek

Williams Creek Gold Quartz Mining Co. Ltd. is negotiating with Hudson Bay Oil and Gas Ltd., to acquire a half interest in two gas wells being prepared for production in the Greenan area, southwestern Saskatchewan, in addition to two half interests already held in the same field.

Concurrent negotiations are being held with Saskatchewan Power Corp. for sale of gas reserves sufficient to justify a 21-year contract, at a suggested price of 17 cents per thousand cubic feet. Reserves are estimated at annual average flow of six million cubic feet a day.

Williams Creek plans a 50-50 venture with a major independent oil company to build a 12-mile, six-inch connecting line to join the Saskatchewan Power gas system at Elrose.

IUC

Shareholders of both companies have consented to the acquisition by International Utilities Corp. of Pacific Intermountain Express Co. IUC stockholders also agreed to a 2 million share increase in preferred stock to 5 million shares outstanding.

The agreement will provide for a tax-free exchange for PIE shareholders of one common share for one convertible preferred share of International Utilities paying $1.25 annual dividend and exchangeable for .8 of a UI common share.

IUC already operates a large eastern motor carrier, Ryder Truck Lines, and the new acquisition will extend the system across the continent, in addition to shipping, utilities and other interests.

CIL

Canadian Industries Ltd. has entered the mining exploration industry with acquisition of a Canadian company having interests around the world.

Terms of the takeover of McPhar Geophysics Ltd. were not detailed, but the Don Mills firm will continue to be operated independently.

McPhar supplies geophysical instruments and exploration service to the mining industry, partly through subsidiary companies in the U.S., Australia and other countries.

The move is in line with a policy of diversification adopted by CIL.

Houston, Ensign

Approval in principal of the amalgamation of Houston Oils Ltd. and Ensign Oils Ltd. has been given by directors of the two Calgary firms, subject to confirmation of stockholders and regulatory bodies.

Each Ensign share will be worth 1 1-3 shares of Houston Oils Ltd., the surviving company.

It is expected the move will give the companies a stronger operating and financial base.

Lockheed

Lockheed Offshore Petroleum Services Ltd. of New Westminster has changed its name to Lockheed Petroleum Services Ltd.

The company, a Lockheed subsidiary formed to serve the world's petroleum industry, was founded in 1969. It has developed a system for completion and production of undersea oil wells at depths to 1,200 feet and beyond.

The change of name was affected to indicate a broadening of company interests.

Basin Study

A study of the Mackenzie River basin as a multi-purpose transportation corridor has been joined by Canadian National Railways, reports Alberta Gas Trunk Lines Co.

Engineering firms in a consortium called Pipeline Engineering and Management Services of Canada are undertaking the $200,000 survey.

CN and AGTL earlier this year co-operated in preliminary studies. Meanwhile, the gas line company is training northerners for operation of a new transmission line in 1974.

Crude Oil Price Hike Spreads to Eight Firms

CALGARY (CP) — Increases in the price paid for Canadian-produced crude oil were announced Wednesday by Sun Oil Co., Ashland Oil Inc. and BP Oil Ltd., bringing to eight the number of companies which have raised their prices.

The increases average 25 cents a barrel but vary with the type of oil and the areas from which it is produced.

The price changes affect about 60 per cent of the crude from Alberta, the major producing area in Canada with about 90 per cent of the total output.

Most companies cited higher production costs and the need to finance petroleum exploration as the reason for the increases, the first general raise in prices in eight years.

Other factors are also involved, such as the recent 25-cents-a-barrel increase for United States crude and the rising price of Middle East oil, mainly because of the blockage of the Suez Canal.

Husky Oil Ltd. was the first company to increase prices when it raised the rate for heavy Lloydminster crude by 40 cents a barrel in mid-November and boosted the price for Lloydminster blend by 35 cents a barrel.

In early December the company increased by 25 cents the price paid for oil in the Bow River pipe line system in southeastern Alberta and Great Northern Oil Ltd. followed a day later with a similar increase in the same area and southwestern Saskatchewan.

Imperial Oil Ltd. announced Tuesday it would increase prices by 25 cents a barrel across western Canada and Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Ltd. disclosed increases of 25 cents a barrel for light crude, 35 cents a barrel for some medium crudes and 15 cents a barrel for condensates.

Earlier Wednesday, Shell announced general increases averaging 25 cents a barrel.

Before the increases, the price of crude varied between $2.25 and $2.70 a barrel.

The variations in increases were due mostly to different levels of demand for the individual oils and desirability of sulphur-free crudes.

APPOINTED manager of the B.C. Telephone Company's island division with headquarters in Victoria is Gordon M. Smith. He will be responsible for the company's operations on the island,, Gulf Islands, Powell River area and Ocean Falls on the mainland coast. Smith, 48, succeeds Gilbert F. Auchinleck who moves to Vancouver as the company's vice-president in charge of staff operations. Smith has been based in Vancouver since 1966. He joined BCT in 1946.

U.S. Importers Seek More Canadian Oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oil importers have responded substantially to President Nixon's move to let more Canadian oil into the U.S., the oil import administration said Wednesday.

Nixon announced two things Dec. 4 to hold back oil price increases: he authorized federal officials to take over regulation of Texas and Louisiana offshore production in federal lands, and he authorized importers to trade any of their unused permits for foreign oil into permits for Canadian oil.

Many overseas permits have gone unused because of oil tanker shortages and other factors.

The oil import administration said importers have asked to trade permits totaling 3.3 million barrels into permits for a like amount of Canadian oil. If the companies qualify, the actual imports from Canada will be limited by the pipeline capacity from that nation.

After the first of the year, when the Canadian oil quota runs out, new regulations will be set up for the Canadian imports.

Meanwhile, the administration has asked for comment on what the new regulations should be.

Eight companies hold the import permits totalling 3.3 million barrels they want switched to Canadian oil. Whether they qualify depends on the oil import administration, but it is expected all will be approved.

Alberta Gas Trunk Plans Big Expansion

MONTREAL (CP) — S. Robert Blair, president and chief executive officer of the Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., said Wednesday the company hopes to undertake a capital expansion program of more than $100 million in 1971.

He said, however, that the expansion would depend upon the necessary approval from government regulatory authorities.

The Calgary executive was in Montreal on the occasion of the listing of Alberta Gas shares on the Montreal Stock Exchange. They began trading Wednesday at $49.25. The company's shares also are traded on the Toronto and Calgary exchanges.

Blair said it was decided to have the shares listed on the Montreal exchange "in recognition of the amount of money we're borrowing here."

Alberta Gas borrowed $118 million in 1970, $45 million coming from the United States and $73 million from across Canada, with about 25 per cent of this amount from Quebec.

The company is sponsoring one of three proposals to build a pipeline from Prudhoe Bay in Alaska to its existing facilities in Alberta. Under its proposal, the $1.5 billion project would be in operation in 1974 provided development of oil resources in the area move ahead on schedule.

Alberta Gas commenced business Dec. 30, 1954, and now owns and operates a natural gas gathering and transmission pipeline system in Alberta of about 3,100 miles.

Optimistic Note Among Investors

By HOWARD LUXENBERG
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Investors are sweeping aside the wreckage of the 24-month bear market with growing confidence that 1971 will bring increased profits, higher stock prices and the best investment climate in three years.

"The stock market clock is telling us that it is time to get ready for one of the biggest bull markets on record," Harry W. Laubscher, director of technical research for Walston and Co. Inc. says.

Robert S. Waill, vice-president of Inverness Counsel, Inc., said "a growing investor appreciation of the strength and stability of American business and of the unusual investment values could well produce an impressive rise in common stock prices."

Economist Eliot Janeway, however, said the Dow Jones industrial average would probably drop into the 600s. He said the Nixon administration's hands-off position on wage and price guidelines "bankrupted its labor policy. The administration has been swept out of the play — it has no economic policy. What it has done has only made the situatin worse."

Market action in the last-half of the year seemed to favor the optimists. The Dow Jones industrial average soared more than 180 points between late May and early December, with most of the gains coming late in the year.

BUYING STAMPEDE

For the better part of 1970, however, Wall Street had been licking the wounds inflicted by rising unemployment; an economy flirting with recession; Washington's inability to cope with inflation; and a raft of failures in the brokerage industry, including two of the more prominent firms.

Then a late November-December buying stampede suddenly turned frowns to smiles and got armchair quarterbacks thinking about prospects for a bull market reminiscent of 1968. The Dow Jones industrial average then came within a whisker of finishing at the magic 1000 level.

The turmoil in the brokerage industry came to a head in October when Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, the nation's biggest stock brokerage house, agreed to acquire Goodbody and Co. The action pulled that firm from the edge of collapse. Merrill Lynch came into the picture at the request of the big board as other methods of securing financial help for Goodbody proved elusive.

Two months earlier the exchange committed its special trust fund to rescue Hayden, Stone Inc. and its 65,000 accounts. Hayden, Stone eventually went out of business by selling part of its assets to Walston and Co., and part to Cogan, Berlind, Weill and Levitt.

MERGER TALK

To help protect customers in the case of failure of a securities firm, the U.S. House of Representatives passed an insurance bill. It provides that individual investors will be guaranteed recovery of up to $50,000 of their funds or securities that become endangered as the result of a brokerage firm's insolvency.

A similar measure has been approved by the Senate banking committee and is expected to pass the Senate.

There were even discussions about a possible merger between the New York and American Stock Exchanges, but the majority of opinion was it "would be premature at this time."

An Amex spokesman said merger talks might be premature but the consolidation effort, with the prospect of important savings for the industry, is continuing as a matter of high priority.

PROVING HIS POINT, C. J. Lonsdale, chairman of the Chemainus General Hospital Board, presented this photo Wednesday to North Cowichan council showing the hazards big trucks present in Chemainus streets. Council turned down an application by Western Forest Products to reactivate its chip depot in Chemainus which would have increased truck traffic.

North Cowichan Bows to Pressure, Refuses Chip Depot Reactivation

By DONNA CLEMENTS

NORTH COWICHAN — Council Wednesday bowed to public pressure and refused Forest Products to reactivate its chip depot in Chemainus.

Don Hammond, manager of the Honeymoon Bay mill, had applied to have its property changed in zoning from commercial to heavy industry so the mill could tackle its chip overflow problem.

C. J. Lonsdale, president of the Chemainus General Hospital Board, advised council members the board was strongly opposed to the application due to fear of dust and wood particles from the loading operation and considerable noise from the trucks going through the hospital area.

GREAT NEED'

He stressed that whatever route the company chose for its chip trucks they would produce a serious hazard to school children on already heavily-used streets.

"There is a great need for a balance between the amount of waterfront used by industry and that available for the enjoyment of residents of the community and also to make Chemainus more atractive to tourists visiting the area.

"Chemainus is a town that should be fit both to live and work in," Lonsdale stressed.

Kurt Horn, president of Cowichan-Malahat SPEC opposed the application because of the "inability of the municipal government to control pollution in local waters."

Horn said he realizes pollution control should "probably belong to the B.C. Pollution Control Board but it is considered by many as a farce and a sham. That puts the responsibility back on the municipality."

After commenting on "filth" often seen in waters at Crofton, Chemainus and Maple Bay, Horn said council has a moral obligation to halt the deterioration of these areas and return them to a good state.

Hammond told council and Horn his company has always had pride in its own pollution control and would abide by any pollution restrictions council set up.

He had noted that when the company decided to reactivate the depot, which was first closed in 1958, it found the property had been rezoned to commercial marine and it was unable to start renovations.

GUEST HOUSE DENIED

"These renovations are fairly extensive and could cost up to $25,000," he said.

On behalf of the pollution control committee, Ald. Tom Burge urged defeat of the application because "we have to have a balance between industry and residence."

A request to change property on Maple Bay Road from residential to commercial also was turned town by council.

In his application, John B. Macaulay told council that he and his wife would like to operate their home as a guest house and cater to older guests who would prefer quiet, luxurious accommodation where they may come for a few days or a few months.

"The number of guests would not exceed five or six couples," Macalay explained. "We would not make any structural changes to buildings other than those required to obtain the necessary licence to operate."

Although letters of opposition from nearby residents did not oppose the Macaulays' plan they expressed their concern about future implications regarding development in the area.

"If the proposed amendment is passed the question arises whether or not it will lead to construction of other units in this area with subsequent deterioration of the pleasant residential aspect existing today," said Mrs. A. L. Seward.

Although the Macaulays said they would agree to have their property rezoned back to residential if they sold, Mayor Gerry Smith said that could not be done.

"There is no way I could see that this could fit in with the general over-all plan for area," Ald. Margaret Robertson said.

"Spot zoning is archaic."

TWO FIRES KILL BOY, WOMAN

Fire claimed the lives of a small boy and an elderly woman on Vancouver Island on Wednesday.

Five-year-old Raymond Arnold Thomas died in a house fire in the Westholme area about seven miles north of Duncan.

His mother was taken to Chemainus Hospital for treatment of shock and minor burns. The boy's father was away at the time of the fire.

The cause of the blaze has not yet been determined.

The second fire at South Wellington took the life of 78-year-old Mrs. Clara Leona Brown.

South Wellington Fire Chief Alex Pindar said the fire is thought to have started in a chimney connected to an old coal and wood stove. The three-room wood frame house was gutted.

SANDY'S LOSING SKEIN EXTENDED TO 29 RIDES

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (CP)—Sandy Hawley, North America's leading jockey, extended his winless streak to 29 Wednesday, placing fourth and last in the only two races in which he rode.

The 21-year-old Whitby, Ont., rider has 453 wins this year but is well back of the record 485 set by Willie Shoemaker in 1953.

Hawley, who has won only once on 85 mounts since arriving here Dec. 7, is not listed to ride today.

Hawley Is 'Bewildered'

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. Desmond Hawley says her son, leading jockey in North America, is bewildered at his inability to obtain good mounts at the Florida racetrack where he is attempting to set a record for season wins.

Sandy Hawley moved to Tropical Park in Miami last week with 452 wins, just 33 behind the 1953 record of 485 set by Willie Shoemaker.

Mrs. Hawley said Wednesday her son telephoned Tuesday and said he could not understand why he wasn't getting good horses.

Since moving to Tropical, he has ridden only one winner, and there are just 12 racing days left after today.

BLAMES AGENT

"One horse he got was a 110-to-1 shot," said Mrs. Hawley. "That's the kind of mounts he's getting."

She said it was apparently the fault of Sandy's agent.

"I don't know what kind of an agent he's got, but he doesn't even tell Sandy the day before what mounts he's got for the next day or even whether he has any."

She said Colin Wicks, the Canadian agent who obtained several top rated mounts for Sandy every day while he was riding at Woodbine and Greenwood tracks in Toronto, found he was not allowed to work as agent at the United States tracks.

BOBBY ORR WAS 'EASIEST' CHOICE

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins' spectacular, 22-year-old defenceman who won four major awards in leading his team to the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup last season, was named Sports Illustrated's 1970 Sportsman of the Year Wednesday.

"Bobby Orr was an obvious choice," said Sports Illustrated publisher Dick Munro. "It probably was the easiest selection we've ever had.

"Bobby would have been an obvious choice in any year. We can't think when an athlete in any year dominated his sport to such a degree."

Orr became the first defenceman to lead the league in scoring and his 120 points were the second highest total ever recorded in the NHL.

JUDY THOMPSON . . . . . WINS SIX EVENTS

Swim Crowns Decided

Judy Thompson set the pace of the annual Victoria Olympian Swimming Club championships Tuesday by splashing to victory in six events.

Miss Thompson captured all four events in the girls' 13-and-14-year-old class and picked up two more triumphs in the open class.

Open victories came in the 100-yard freestyle and 200-yard individual medley events.

Carey Busfield sparkled in the girls' 10-and-under class. She won three of four events, placed second in the 50-yard breaststroke and then placed second in the open 100-yard backstroke.

SETS CLUB RECORD

Her second - place finish in the open event produced a club record for 10-and-under swimmers o 10:20.1 minutes, eclipsing the old mark of 1:24.8.

Diane Forbes registered four wins, two in the 15-and-16 age class and two more in the open competition.

Stanley Davis and Bill Sherwood each won four events in boys' divisions.

THIS TYPE OF BRAWLING HAS GOT TO STOP, SAYS CAMPBELL . . .

. . . AS $15,850 IN FINES IMPOSED

Penalties to Increase Until Proper Result Achieved

MONTREAL (CP)—Some National Hockey League players may have second thoughts before they become embroiled in any more bench-clearing brawls this season.

The players—members of Montreal Canadiens, Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins, Chicago Black Hawks, Minnesota North Stars, California Golden Seals and Pittsburgh Penguins—received word Wednesday from NHL president Clarence Campbell on fines the league is imposing as a result of five general melees this season.

Campbell imposed a total of $15,850 in fines following an investigation into the five brawls. Included in the total was $13,600 given automatically for the infractions.

A club fine of $1,000 against Montreal was assessed because the Canadiens were involved in three of the five incidents on which Campbell passed judgment Wednesday.

"This type of brawling has got to stop," said Campbell. "Penalties will be increased, including suspension until the proper result is achieved."

A urle went into effect last Saturday stating that "a bench minor penalty shall be imposed on the team of the first player to leave his bench" to join a fight.

The first of the bench-clearing incidents took place in Boston Garden Nov. 8 in a game involving the Bruins and Canadiens.

Fourteen Bruins and 13 Montreal players were handed automatic $100 fines each for leaving their respective benches to engage in the on-ice fracas.

Left winger Peter Mahovlich of the Canadiens was handed an additional $100 for being the first player from either team to leave his bench to join the melee.

Similar automatic fines of $100 per player were assessed against 14 members of Pittsburgh Penguins and 13 Canadiens when both benches emptied at the end of the second period in a game at the Montreal Forum Nov. 28.

In this incident Pittsburgh's back-up goalie Al Smith and Montreal's rightwinger Claude Larose were given additional $100 fines for leading their teams over the boards.

Boston and Chicago became embroiled in a dispute Dec. 2 in Chicago with 12 players from each team jumping off the bench to join the melee, enriching the NHL coffers by $2,400.

In addition, Boston netminder Gerry Cheevers received an automatic $100 fine for leaving his crease to fight and a further $150 fine was given to Boston forward John McKenzie for being the first player to leave his bench.

The same night in Minnesota, the North Stars and California Golden Seals got into a brawl resulting in $2,550 fines.

A total of 22 players—11 from each team—jumped into the tiff in which the main event was a bout between Dennis Hextall of the Seals and Minnesota's Bill Goldsworthy.

The latest bench-clearing incident occurred at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto Dec. 9 when 11 Maple Leafs and 13 Montreal players left their benches and were fined a total of $2,400.

Goalies Phil Myre of Montreal and Bruce Gamble of the Leafs received $100 penalties for leaving their respective goal areas to join the fracas.

Guy Lapointe of the Canadiens was fined $100 for leaving the penalty box to join the fight and $200 for molesting the penalty timekeeper.

All fines will be withheld by the respective clubs from the salaries of players involved and go to the NHL players' emergency fund.

BILL WALKER

Here are some nibblers for the seasonal trade — the cocktail hour talk shows . . . And if the B.C. Lions do get quarterback Russ Jackson from Ottawa, that would be great, for one year, or two, but is this the answer the Lions are really seeking? They would have to give up a Jim Young, or a couple of somebodies, or both, all of whom could possibly be replaced, but how would this fit in with any concrete rebuilding plan? It wouldn't. Take it from there . . .

There has been a lot of talk, too, about changing the rules regarding football footwear since Tom Dempsey kicked his record 63-yard field goal, but it will soon die away . . . because this 60-yard stuff is old hat, or whatever happened to the dropkick? There was a letter to the editor recently in the New York Times claiming that a college player named Mark Payne kicked a 63-yard dropkick, against the wind yet, in 1915 . . . another saying a high school player this season booted a 60-yard field goal, and a further notation that at McGill Stadium, in Montreal, in a game between Queens and McGill, a chap named Pedro Svinaga made a 65-yard dropkick . . . The records aren't in yet on penalty goals in English rugger, but I'm certain they will surpass anything mentioned above. Any takers?

And if you don't think our area lacks gun enthusiasts, you should have tried to get down to the Goldstream flats for the Fish and Game Club turkey shoot last Sunday . . . Club president Bob Kennedy had to give up his chance to stand with the sharpshooters and direct traffic . . . The parking lot around the clubhouse was jammed solid most of the afternoon, and cars stretched for about a mile, both sides of the highway, around the entrance . . . And from Game Club executives, this plea to an owner of a model 12 Winchester who shot on Saturday: You made off with the wrong gun . . . Yours is being held by game club officials . . . Please check . . .

A compatriot asked and the answer is: It was 10 years ago that Maurice Rocket Richard retired from the game he loved so much, and I think I recall the story well enough to repeat it. When Richard broke in with the Canadiens, he was as naive as any rookie could get. Witness his first train trip with the Habs. It was early morning and, as Richard awakened, he spotted his shoes disappearing into the corridor. The porter had taken them to shine them. Well, the Rocket let loose such a roar that the porter dropped the shoes and fled to the end of the car, and sanctuary in the men's room. He refused to come out until the Rocket had calmed down . . . Yes, Jim Irvine of Ladysmith has heard from coach Brian Hughes of last year's summer Royals of soccer fame; and the word is that Hughes has more or less made up his mind to emigrate from the U.K. His first choice is Victoria, and his second choice is Atlanta. Meanwhile, Mrs. Irvine has heard from Mrs. Hughes, who has reached the same decision as her husband. Her only choice is Victoria. Jim is taking it from there!

Jockey Sandy Hawley has been having trouble getting winners in his quest for Bill Shoemaker's all-time record of 485 victories, but he shouldn't worry. He can always think back to two years ago. He had ridden fewer than 10 winners at this stage of his career, in 1968 and was making the handsome sum of $73 a week. This year he is expected to gross $160,000 . . . on racing, it appears too as if the Max Bell stable, as such, is almost no more . . . Max has undergone another serious operation, and now is recuperating. Obviously, he is taking little interest in horses . . . Meanwhile, his trainer, Roy Johnson, has been appointed trainer for Wilmot, Baker and Burns . . . Johnson trained for Bell for 13 years, and saddled two Queen's Plate winners, Whistling Sea in 1965 and Merger in 1968 . . . Jack Diamond's highly regarded Command Module will probably make his first California start at Santa Anita on Dec. 29, all being well . . . And gosh, guess what! Washington Senators will have three $100,000 players on the roster next year — Curt Flood, Denny McLain and Frank Howard . . . And it may have been missed, but when the baseball writers were polled recently on the National League's Most Valuable Player, Willie Mays never even got one vote . . . shame!

It was the obvious question, but quarterback Daryle Lamonica went the interviewer one better following last week's win by Oakland over Kansas City. When asked why the Raiders didn't resort to their usual last-minute heroics to obtain victory, Lamonica said: "It wasn't in our game plan." G'nite all.

STAN MIKITA
. . . grabs spotlight

Mikita Plots Angle —Four Goals Follow

By The Canadian Press

On any other National Hockey League club, Stan Mikita would rate superstar status.

But playing with Chicago Black Hawks, the 30-year-old centre has surrendered much of the spotlight to the Golden Jet, Bobby Hull, and more recently to Tony Esposito, the spectacular Hawk goaltender.

Mikita, the Czechoslovakian-born veteran of the Black Hawks for 11 seasons, took the encores Wednesday night, scoring four goals and assisting on another as Chicago drubbed St. Louis Blues 8-3.

In other games, Boston Bruins dumped Los Angeles Kings 6-4, Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2, Minnesota North Stars and Montreal Canadiens played to a 1-1 tie and California Golden Seals thumped Detroit Red Wings 4-2.

Mikita's four goals pushed his season's total to nine and with 23 assists moved him to seventh spot in the NHL individual scoring race, 25 points back of Phil Esposito of Boston, who has 57 points.

EVENS COUNT

At Chicago, Mikita's first goal evened the count at 1-1 in the first period. The Hawks exploded with five goals in the second and two more in the final 20 minutes to register their 12th straight home-ice victory, a club record.

Mikita's other points came in the second-period barrage.

Four-time winner of the Hart Trophy as the league's scoring champ, Mikita said after the game he has only started "to feel good" the last week or so after spending the early part of the season trying to adjust to the slighter hook in his blade.

League rules cut down on the amount of curve in the blade this season. Mikita felt the lesser curve had hampered his shooting.

"I was compensating for that, but I was doing it wrong," he said.

He changed his angle of carrying the puck last week, however, and if Wednesday's performance is any measure it did the trick.

The win gave Chicago 45 points in the West Division standings, seven ahead of second-place St. Louis.

At Boston, Esposito scored his 27th and 28th goals of the season within a space of 49 seconds as the Bruins handed Los Angeles its ninth consecutive setback.

The Bruins, who led 1-0 after 20 minutes, increased their margin to 4-0 in the second period before Los Angeles tallied twice. The teams exchanged goals in the final period.

Esposito has nine more points than team-mate Bobby Orr, who picked up three assists in the game and who holds down second spot in NHL scoring. Esposito's 28 goals is tops in the league.

The victory enabled the Bruins to hold their two-point edge over New York in the East Division.

SHUTOUT No. 4

At New York, Ed Giacomin became the first NHL goalie to register his fourth shutout this season, stopping 20 Sabre shots.

His shutout was New York's second in a row and sixth of the season, making the Rangers the NHL's leading defensive team.

The Rangers snowed the Sabres under with three third-period goals against goaltender Joe Daley as they skated to their 15th straight victory on home ice.

Billy MacMillan rapped in his ninth and 10th goals this season to pace the Leafs, who needed two late goals to break a 2-2 tie.

ROCKET COACH DRAWS BAN FOR THREE GAMES

PENTICTON (CP) — Dr. Arnold Lowden of Penticton, president of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, announced Wednesday he has suspended manager-coach Joe Tennant of the Kamloops Rockets for his actions during a game between Kamloops and Chilliwack Bruins in Kamloops on Dec. 6.

Tennant was ejected from the game for stepping onto the ice during a brawl and the referee's report of the game indicted him for appearing in the vicinity of the players' box after his ejection.

Lowden said the suspension will be for three games in the period of Dec. 26 to Dec. 30, adding he had given Tennant 10 days in which to find a replacement for himself as manager-coach of the Rockets before the suspension comes into effect.

Little Big Man In Cougar Win

NEW WESTMINISTER — Rob Little provided some mighty big help as Victoria Cougars tucked away a 6-4 victory over New Westminster Royals in a Coastal Division game of the B.C. Junior Hockey League here Wednesday.

Playing his first game in the past three because of university exams, Little scored two unassisted goals and had an assist to pace the Cougar win.

Cougars moved into a five-point lead over runner-up Vancouver Centennials with the victory, the Victoria club's ninth along with two ties in the past 13 encounters.

Little opened scoring in the first period and added the Cats' fourth goal in the second period on a breakaway with the Victoria club shorthanded.

John Dalzell scored an unassisted power-play goal late in the first period to tie the game 1-1 for Royals. Early in the second period, New Westminster took the lead for the first time as John Dalzell and brother Jim set up Dale Craig.

This 2-1 margin was to last a bare 10 minutes.

Defenceman Randy Bock collected the equalizer at 12:11 on a fine individual effort which started the Victorians on a four-goal spree.

●

Cougar defenceman Bob Mayer scored one minute and 33 seconds later, before Little cashed in his final goal.

Bruce Cowick blasted in what proved to be the winning tally at 6:13 of the third period before Royals staged a partial comeback with two straight goals.

John Dalzell counted his second of the night and Gerry Vachon added another to pull New Westminster within one goal.

Ted Plowe then scored the clincher for Cougars to bring his goal production this season to 27, tops in the league. He moved into a tie for first place in the individual scoring race with Vic Mercredi of Penticton Broncas, each with 50 points.

Cougars played without two regulars — defenceman Gerry Bond, who had to finish writing exams at Uvic, and winger Scott Munro, who had been benched last week for ineffective play.

With university exams at an end, and barring unexpected injuries, coach Ron Maxwell can count on the services of all his regulars when Cougars return to Memorial Arena in Victoria for an 8:30 p.m. Saturday date with Chilliwack Bruins.

The only other BCJHL game scheduled for Wednesday night, an Okanagan Division tussle between Kamloops Rockets and Vernon Essos, was postponed until early in the new year.

Frazier's Pilot Asking Three Million for Bout

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Yancy (Yank) Durham, manager of heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, is asking $3 million for Frazier to fight Muhammad Ali.

Moreover, he wants the same guarantee for the deposed champion, who is also known as Cassius Clay.

Durham said Wednesday he has received offers from several places, including Madison Square Garden, the Astrodome in Houston and from closed circuit television.

"Another one was from some business people in Philadelphia," Durham was quoted in the Philadelphia Bulletin as saying.

"They offered me $2 million and I told them it wasn't enough," he said.

"I have an agreement with Clay and his people that both boys will get the same amount of money when they fight.

"Between us," Durham continued, "there's no question that we're gonna fight.

"The only question is where and for whom. When we get what we want, we'll settle on the date," he said.

ALBERQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champ Muhammad Ali says he's getting out of the boxing business as soon as he polishes off Joe Frazier.

"Yea, I believe I'm getting on out," he said Wednesday. "I'm sure I am. This will be the climax of my whole career."

Ali, also known as Cassius Clay, said he thinks the big fight of his life will be the Frazier fight.

Ali said he plans to retire "unscratched."

"I don't want any more to do with it after I beat Frazier," he said.

Canucks Top Aussie Squad

AUCKLAND, N.Z. — Former Victoria player Susan Butt chipped in a victory as the Federation Cup women's tennis team of Canada defeated an Auckland city squad 4-2 in one-set, warm-up matches for the world title play in Australia.

Miss Butt downed Elaine Stephen 9-8 in one singles match while Andree Martin of Montreal beat Beverly Vercoe 9-3; Jane O'Hara defeated Miss Vercoe, 9-4 and Miss Martin combined with Miss O'Hara to tumble Cecilia Fleming and Miss Stephen, 6-4, 6-1.

Plateau Skiers Get Deeper Snow

Reports of deep snow make prospects appear bright for weekend skiers at Forbidden Plateau.

Skies were cloudy this morning and the temperature hovered around 30 degrees. There is 26 inches of new snow at the bottom of the hill and 36 inches of fresh at the top. Base snow is 36 inches deep at the bottom and 58 at the top.

Exhausted Oscar Yields to Doctor

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentine heavyweight Oscar Bonavena said Wednesday night he will not fight Floyd Patterson Jan. 22 as was announced in New York earlier in the day.

"I want to have this fight, since I gave my word to Mr. Teddy Brenner (Madison Square Garden matchmaker), but my personal doctor has advised me to rest and forget boxing for awhile, and I have no other choice but to do just that", Bonavena said in a telephone interview.

Announcement that Bonavena would fight Patterson, former heavyweight champion, was made by Harry Markson, the Garden's director of boxing.

Bonavena's doctor, Roberto Paladino, said "Bonavena is in excellent physical shape, but he is exhausted after his extraordinary fight" against Muhammad Ali Dec. 7.

Bonavena lasted until the closing moments of the 15th round when he was knocked out for the first time in his career.

"I think that by the middle of February I will be in condition to fight again," Bonavena said.

DERBY FIGHT TO CONTINUE

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky State Racing Commission said Wednesday it will appeal a court decision that gave the winner's purse in the 1968 Kentucky Derby to Dancer's Image.

Circuit Judge Henry Meigs ruled last Friday there was not sufficient evidence to disqualify Peter Fuller's thoroughbred from participation in the purse in the 1968 Derby.

His decision, in effect, overruled the five members of the racing commission, who last year, held that Calumet Farm's Forward Pass should receive the $122,600 first prize.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry Thornton

Within days almost all Island rivers and streams will have their first major run of winter steelhead. Incidental catches have rapidly increased from almost all Island rivers as pre-season steelheaders take trial trips to perfect their tackle. Some of the larger rivers like the Gold, Campbell, Puntledge, Stamp, Nanaimo and Cowichan have already experienced minor runs and will increase in productivity as the traditional Boxing Day opening draws near.

For the beginner, steelhead are almost a myth. As a novice he may already have spent many hours on various streams fruitlessly casting in an attempt to hook one of these trophy trout — but as yet, with no success. There are no short-cuts to becoming a master steelheader, nor to becoming skilled and adept at the sport of steelheading. River time is what every tyro must acquire before he will beach that first exalted fish, but the following suggestions on tackle may reduce that time.

It is interesting to note that up-Island steelheaders are generally float fishermen while south-Island steelheaders prefer drifting. The reason for the difference is hard to determine and appears to be only a matter of personal preference, which has grown with each area. Both methods are equally successful. However, every angler should eventually become adept with each method as every stream is fished best to one or the other method and in many situations to both.

Basic tackle for the float fisherman can be divided into two major catagories; the major tackle, which consists or rod, reel and line; and the terminal tackle, consisting of lures and bait and basic hook-up.

Major tackle is relatively simple but a few specific points ensures its greatest ease of use for the novice.

For float fishing it is mandatory that your rod be long. A ten-foot rod is most common with many anglers using rods up to thirteen feet. The long rod is necessary to ensure a proper drift of the float by allowing the angler to keep his line off the water. If the line is permitted on the stream surface the current quickly creates a belly which pulls the lure from the bottom away from the fish or, which inhibits a successful strike because of slack line.

Steelhead have earned the nickname "ironhead" in part because they have very tough mouth tissues. Your rod, while long and supple for greatest action, must have a stiff tip for setting the hook.

Reels are many and varied and generally depend on the angler's experience with other forms of fishing. A spinning reel allows the greatest ease for it provides a quick pick-up of slack line and greatest dexterity in some of the smaller, difficult to fish, streams and creeks. Experienced steelheaders use spinning reels because of their adaptibility but many also use single action reels like the Silex or casting reels like the Ambassador. The Silex is the preferred reel for float fishrmen for it permits more efficient presentation of float-fished bait and lures. Casting reels like the Ambassador provide for distance and is a preferred reel for large streams whether float fished or for drift fishing.

Fishing line has become so varied now that the angler need have little worry, providing he buys quality line. For winter steelhead a minimum weight for the novice would be line of fifteen pounds test with a more desirable weight being twenty pounds. The steelhead averages eight pounds and is caught in a stream also having a weight factor, which the angler must contend with when fighting his trophy. One snap of a steelhead's head is sufficient to break line weights greater than fifteen pounds.

Terminal tackle comprises a float, weights, swivel, leader, hook and bait or lure.

The most commonly used hook is a number 2-0 off-set bait hook. Many varieties are available with preference being an individual matter.

Leader line is important in float fishing for it literally gives the angler many hours more of actual on-the-stream fishing time. Leader hook-ups are prepared prior to the trip to be quickly tied to the swivel when lost. Leader should be limp monofilament and must be a few pounds less than the main line.

Weights are of two basic kinds — split shot or eared sinkers. Eared sinkers have the advantage over split shot for they do not crimp your line. They are also easy to remove and can be used over again. Medium to large split shot should be used, or medium to small eared sinkers.

Floats come in all sizes, shapes and colors. A medium-sized torpedo-shaped float is generally preferred, particularly as on the cast it creates little splash as compared with the more circular floats. Floats should have a slit opening for quick change and a bright top for visibility.

Terminal tackle should be attached as follows for best results when float fishing.

A large swivel is tied to the end of the main line with approximately two feet of leader tied to the other end of the swivel.

If fishing with roe, a barrel knot is tied to the shank of your hook with the leader threaded through the eye of the hook. Pushing the leader back through the eye will create a loop where the bait can be placed without it falling from the hook. A small strip of red wool is usually tied to the hook along with the bait for added attraction.

When fishing lures, slip them on the leader, add a small bead so the lure will not slip on the hook, then tie your hook to the end of the leader with a strong improved clinch or fisherman's knot. A small split shot should be crimped about an inch above the lure on the leader so that the lure won't slip up and down the leader.

Next week, "Float Fishing the Stream."

Betsy Overcomes Error With Great Second Run

VAL D'ISERE, France (CP) — "I made a mistake and almost gave up on the first leg," Betsy Clifford, 17-year-old Ottawa skiing sensation, said after stealing the women's special slalom from the favored French girls at the Criterium de la Premier Neige Wednesday.

But "everything went beautifully in the second leg."

The Canadian high school student was in fourth place more than a full second behind first-leg leader Florence Steurer of France when she shoved off on her second run down the treacherous slopes of Solaise Peak.

"I took a chance and just went on that second one," Betsy said. "It was icy but I really made time at the top. I was using my knees and everything went great."

Miss Clifford, who at 16 became the youngest skier to win a gold medal in world competition, added the Criterium World Cup event to her giant slalom victory at Val Gardena, Italy, last February by whisking throught the second run Wednesday in 36.03 seconds.

WAS TOO CAUTIOUS

Her first run was faster — 35.60 seconds — but Miss Steurer was overcautious her second time down and the Canadian teen-ager edged the French girl on total time by 59.100ths of a second, 71.63 to 72.22 seconds.

Miss Steurer had posted a first-leg clocking of 34.26 before slowing to 37.96 over the tricky course.

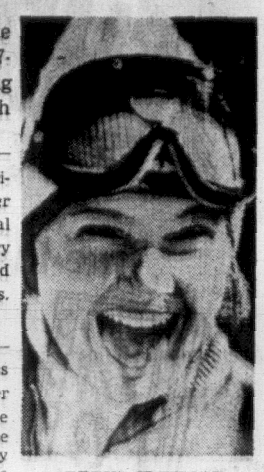
Wiltrud Drexel of Austria placed third with a combined time of 72.43 seconds; Britt Lafforgue, France, was fourth in 72.61; and Barbara Cochran, United States, fifth in 73.26.

THIRD IN CUP RACE

Judy Crawford of Toronto finished 18th with a time of 78.31 seconds, while Diane Culver of Montreal came 27th in 80.38 and Carolyn Oughton of Calgary was 28th with a clocking of 80.84.

Diana Gibson of Toronto was among competitors disqualified for falling or missing a gate.

The Canadian girls fared well in a big field of 60 skiers from 12 countries, but all the glory belonged to Betsy. With her 25 points for first-place honors, she vaulted to third place in the early-season standings in the World Cup race, close behind the 29 points of leader Francoise Macchi of France and the 28 of Miss Steurer.



BETSY CLIFFORD

Russel Wins Giant Slalom

VAL D'ISERE, France (Reuter) — Patrick Russel of France won the men's giant slalom in the Criterium de la Premiere Neige World Cup ski competition here today.

Russel, 24, registered the best time in both legs of the event, clocking an unofficial total of two minutes 34.65 seconds.

His compatriot, world slalom champion Jean-Noel Augert, 21, was second with a combined time of 2:35.29. Italian Gustav Thoeni of Italy was third in 2:36.72 and Henri Duvillard of France fourth in 2:37.77.

The event was held in biting cold on a 1,300-metre course. The drop was 354 metres with 57 gates.

PELE VOTED BEST OF YEAR

LONDON (AP) — Pele, the Brazilian soccer star, was named Sportsman of 1970 Wednesday in an Associated Press poll of European sports writers. Heavyweight boxer Cassius Clay was the only American named, being picked eighth.

Eddy Merckx, a Belgian cyclist, was second and Chris Papanicolaou of Greece, the only man ever to vault 18 feet, was third. Tennis star Margaret Court of Australia was voted the top woman athlete.

ATHENS (AP) — Switzerland beat Greece 1-0 Wednesday in a first-leg European Nations Championship Cup soccer game.

Japanese Girl Wins Fifth Gold Medal

BANGKOK (AP) — A 17-year-old Japanese girl swimmer, Yoshimi Nishigawa, became the first athlete ever to win five gold medals as Japan continued to dominate the Asian Games Wednesday.

With four days left in the sixth Asian games, Japan had 69 of the 115 gold medals awarded so far and appeared likely to take at least 75 of the 136 at stake in Asia's version of the Olympics.

The Japanese also had 44 silver medals and 17 bronze.

South Korea was second in the gold medal race with 13, Iran had nine gold, India six and Thailand and Israel five each.

Miss Nishigawa won her fifth gold medal with a record performance in the women's 400-metre individual medley. She was timed in 2:26.5, 12 full seconds better than the old mark.

Miss Nishigawa previously had set Games records in the 100 and 200 metre freestyle.

Documents Show Spying Powers of U.S. Services

By JOHN S. LANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret military guidelines give the U.S. navy and air force intelligence-gathering duties in the United States similar to those of the army, which a senator says has spied on members of Congress and hundreds of other civilians.

Documents obtained by The Associated Press, including one stamped "secret" on every page, state the two military branches have "investigative and reporting requirements relating to civil disturbances and dissident or subversive activities. . . ."

Until now little has been known about navy and air force domestic intelligence operations, although the army's activities in this field—undertaken under similar guidelines—have been the subject of a year-long controversy.

The furore flared again Wednesday when Senator Sam Ervin (Dem. N.C.) said army agents had collected information on Senator Adlai Stevenson III (Dem. Ill.); former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner, now a federal judge; and Representative Abner Mikva (Dem. Ill.).

Ervin, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights and a long-time crusader against invasion of privacy, said military agents also snooped on the activities of state and local officials, political contributors, newspaper reporters, lawyers and church figures.

FORMER AGENT TALKED

His information, Ervin said, was supplied by a former army agent who wrote that his team "was collecting information on every individual and organization in the state of Illinois who espoused discontent with the military involvement in Southeast Asia or who openly opposed the Nixon administration's controversial domestic policies."

A spokesman said the army is gravely concerned by the reports and is looking into them. He added that army policy emphatically prohibits collection of information of the type reported to have been gathered in Illinois.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said in response to a question: "It's inconceivable to me that would take place. We certainly don't condone it."

Another former military intelligence agent said in an interview Wednesday night that similar data had been collected by army agents in other sections of the country.

As an example, he cited information he said was compiled by the Army in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area during April and May of 1968. The files, he said, consisted of index cards naming such individuals as university professors, civil rights workers, college and high school students and a YMCA employee.

MENTION NAACP

Other cards, the former agent said, mentioned such groups as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

This former agent, who would not allow use of his name, said the files were being discarded by the army.

There have been earlier reports that other regional military intelligence centres were building files on civilians.

NBC television, for instance, reported Dec. 1 that agents in Washington had compiled dossiers on many private citizens, including Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.).

Still other reports have indicated that military intelligence agents had mingled among delegates at the 1968 Democratic and Republican conventions.

The documents obtained by the AP do not name individuals on whom air force and navy agents collect data. Rather, they trace the broad guidelines under which the agents operate.

STATES AIM

One document, signed by Robert S. Moot, assistant defence secretary and dated Sept. 9, states that "The air force has similar investigative and reporting requirements, for which the Office of Special Investigations (OSI)is the focal point." It added:

"OSI has established requirements for collecting and reporting information relation to: (a) demonstrations, agitation, propaganda and disruptive activities directed against the role of the United States in Vietnam, selective service, or the military establishment which affect the security, mission or viability of U.S. Air Force bases and other installations . . .

"(b) civil rights and racial agitation occurring on air force bases or involving air force personnel;

"And (c) riots, demonstrations and other civil disturbances . . . which may require federal intervention and use of military troops to preserve or restore law and order and which may therefore necessitate air force airlift of troops and materiel."

LISTS ELEMENTS

The document signed by Moot said the navy "has issuances which prescribe investigate and reporting requirements relating to civil disturbances and dissident or subversive activities which pose a potential threat to the security of a naval or Marine Corps facility, or to good order and discipline within a naval or Marine Corps command."

In addition, a document dated May 14 lists 14 elements of information which the Naval Investigative Service considers essential. Several of the points relate to suspected sabotage, espionage and "information of the clandestine introduction into the United States, or plans therefore, of foreign nationals, nuclear, chemical or biological weapons."

Details of the army's domestic intelligence activities were first disclosed last January by Christopher H. Pyle, a former intelligence officer, in an article in the magazine Washington Monthly.

In response to congressional inquiries prompted by Pyle's article, the army said it had kept so-called "blacklists" including the names, descriptions and pictures of civilians "who might be involved in civil disturbance situations;" that it had operated computer banks for storing civil disturbance information; and it had infiltrated civilian groups.

But in making the disclosures, the army said that during the past year it had sharply curtailed such activities.

Ervin disputed military claims that investigations of civilians were limited to those who showed leanings toward violence or other illegal conduct.

"Apparently," he said, "anyone who in the army's definition was 'left of centre' was a prospective candidate for politcal surveillance."

Representative Mikva termed the surveillance of himself and other civilians "an incredible breach of democratic principles" which "goes beyond McCarthyism."

The congressman likened the surveillance to actions of a military police state and said "we should eliminate from the service everyone who is responsible."

Phone Centre Staffed In January

Screening and training of volunteers to staff a crisis phone centre will begin in January, Need spokesman Sylvia Blenkin said Wednesday.

The centre, as envisaged by several University of Victoria students who are moving to set it up, would handle calls around the clock from people experiencing some kinds of personal crisis such as depression, bad drug trip or extreme lonliness.

It would also provide information on other social agencies in Greater Victoria.

The centre is to open early in April in the Emmanuel Baptist Church, 1900 Fernwood, which Cool-Aid plans to buy.

However, training of volunteers who will talk to distressed callers is to begin next month, Miss Blenkin said. Professionals attached to various local agencies have offered to help in the training and screening.

Anyone who wants to take part in the program should attend the next general meeting at the Uvic Student Union Building Jan. 12.

Miss Blenkin said people who don't get selected to man one of the crisis phones should not feel they have nothing to offer the new service because other volunteers will be needed to handle filing and other office duties.

Some 45 people have already joined Need.

Cost of setting up the crisis centre could run as high as $1,400, and it is hoped the money can be raised through private donations, Miss Blenkin said.

Motel Clerk Fined $10 Under Human Rights Act

Elizabeth Carol Froese, a motel desk clerk in Terrace, was fined $10 Tuesday for violating the Human Rights Act by refusing accommodation at the Slumber Lodge Motel to a native Indian.

B.C. Human Rights Act director Jack Sherlock said today it is the first time a case under the act has gone to court. Most cases are settled out of court through mediation of agents of the act at any one of 40 offices in the province.

The Indian, David Earl Parnell of Port Edward, testified that Mrs. Froese told him he could not have a room he had reserved by telephone because "the Slumber Lodge manager made it a policy not to have Indians in here."

Mrs. Froese pleaded not guilty and told the court, "The fact that management denies orders were given evades the truth."

Provincial Court Judge C. J. Norrington said he felt Mrs. Froese had perhaps been victimized in the case.

Gifts Refused

VANCOUVER (CP) — By a seven to two vote, Vancouver city council Tuesday night turned down a request for $20,000 from the Unemployed Citizens Welfare and Improvement Council to be distributed for Christmas to single welfare recipients and childless couples on welfare.

Free on Bail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Laurence Kershaw, 42, a stock-broker jailed Friday for income tax evasion, was granted $1,000 bail Wednesday and now is free pending an appeal. Kershaw was sentenced to 30 days in jail on each of two counts, to run consecutively. He was also fined $1,000 on each count.

Woman Acquitted

NELSON (CP) Elenor Patko, 27, of the Cranbrook area, was aquitted Wednesday of a charge of manslaughter in the death July 1 of her husband, Istvan, 35.

Mr. Justice A. B. McFarlane of the British Columbia Supreme Court told the jury before they formed their verdict that a person who is "unlawfully assaulted is justified in repelling force by force."

Mrs. Patko had testified she was knocked unconscious by her husband before she shot him with a .22-calibre rifle.

Bonaventure Inches Way To Formosa

VANCOUVER (CP) — The former Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure, on her last voyage to a scrapyard in Formosa, is slowly working her way southward along the east coast of Africa about 1,200 miles north of the Cape of Good Hope.

Ship-broker N. W. Kennedy, the man who bought the vessel earlier this year, said Wednesday the Bonaventure and the tug hauling her are moving at an average speed of 5.2 knots in "a pretty slow process."

So far in the towing operation there have been no difficulties. The ship is expected to arrive in Formosa about Feb. 5.

CAMPBELL ATTACKER JAILED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Refusing repeatedly to defend himself before a court he called a "pack of dogs," David Johan Johannsen, 26, was jailed a month Wednesday for assaulting Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell.

"Blood debts will be paid in blood," the former Victoria man, a member of the Maoist Canadian Communist Party Marxist-Leninist, told Provincial Judge M. E. Ferguson.

He was fined $100 or a month in jail but told Judge Ferguson he refused to pay a "Fascist court." He was charged after an assault on the mayor Dec. 2 during a civic election campaign meeting at the University of B.C.

The Sports Dropout: If Schools Are to Get Him Off His Rear They Must Put Athletics Into Curriculum

By NEILL GADDES

School athletic programs will have to become part of the curriculum if trustees hope to combat a declining student participation in sports, a school official said Wednesday.

"It has to be curricular because most of the people with increasing leisure time in the future will be the least creative in using it," Dave Price, supervisor of research and testing, said.

He added that trustees must decide if athletics are important enough to be part of the curriculum. If it is, teachers will have to be paid for their time, he said.

Price made these recommendations in a report submitted to trustees in October when the board discussed school athletics.

The subject came up again at an education meeting Monday when Trustee Daphne Temple said junior high school students are "browned off" with sports because they are pushed into competition too young.

"We start them off the wrong way, far too young and perhaps this is affecting the athletic program and participation," she said.

Board chairman Carron Jameson said, however, he would like to see everyone involved in an athletic program.

"I am looking at the matter of athletics as self-development," he said Wednesday, pointing out that he viewed school sports as a chance for a youngster to master game skills.

These skills, he said, the youngster would have for life.

He hopes to see programs "intensified" at the elementary level but in a non-competitive capacity.

But are the present school athletic programs designed only for those who can do well at them?

Gary Taylor, vice-principal of Lansdowne Junior Secondary, views school athletics as a triangle, rising from a broad base of physical education classes to an apex of extra-curricular school teams.

He said students wishing to go beyond regular physical education classes and build on their athletic talents can participate in the intra-mural, or inter-house, sports programs.

Taylor, a former high school coach, said trustees feel there is too much time spent on the extra-curricular program at the expense of the intra-mural program.

"Over the past few years there has been a decline in the interest of students willing to participate."

He said he felt participation at the elementary and junior secondary levels is good but by the time students reach high school there are so many more interests open to them.

Problems of additional staff to cover a bigger program came up at Monday's meeting and Jameson suggested instructors could be found at the Manpower office.

He said it may be an idea to study the possibility of creating an in-service program involving young people out of work or attending the University of Victoria who would be happy to help for a "modest sum."

●

Price notes there is a duplication between school and community sports programs.

"It seems logical that they get together."

But Dr. John Wiens, the board's director of instruction, said he had reservations about some of the baseball, soccer and hockey programs being offered very young children.

"There are some communities — although I don't think it applies in Victoria — where young students will say they've been told by their Little League coaches that they shouldn't play the school sport because they learn all the wrong way," he said.

TAYLOR

Stan Gill, physical education department head at Mount Douglas Senior Secondary, has observed a decline of student participation at some schools although this hadn't seemed to affect Mount Douglas this year.

Some schools, he said had no intra-mural programs at all because of the lack of interest. Instead these schools offered free activity periods in which students chose what they wanted to do.

Mount Douglas students run their own sports council which involves scheduling intra-mural athletics and assigning students referees for the games.

"We have had queries from students about Canadian football but the problem is to get the school board to accept it," Gill said.

●

He said, however, both football and ice hockey ran into problems of adequate equipment and coaching.

Student involvement in tailoring sport programs beyond the traditional ones has been met with the community-recreation classes, part of the school curriculum.

Gill said at Mount Douglas, the course, offered only in Grade 12, includes curling, golf, pool and bowling utilizing community facilities.

WAY IT WAS is the way it's going to be on the third floor of the Provincial Museum. Finishing touches are being added to Grand Hotel, part of a turn-of-the-century street scene in British Columbia under construction. Museum visitors will be able to saunter back in history for a life-sized look at such memories as old-time railway station and print shop. Display will include the stern cabin of Capt. James Cook's sailing ship. Project is expected to be completed by 1973.

Region to Add 78 Acres To Elk-Beaver Lake Park

The Capital Regional District will purchase 78 acres to add to Elk-Beaver Lake park in Saanich.

This was disclosed following a closed-door meeting Wednesday of the district's board.

Sixteen properties are involved in the Jennings Lane-Patricia Bay Highway area just south of Eagle Beach on Elk Lake.

"We are extremely hopeful that the bulk of the negotiations will be resolved to the mutual satisfaction of the property owners and the region," board chairman and Saanich Mayor, Hugh Curtis, said in a statement.

"We are, however, prepared to expropriate if direct negotiations fail to bring agreement."

The park, owned by the Capital Regional District and maintained by Saanich, comprises 960 acres of land and water — six times the size of Beacon Hill Park.

Highway widening and park purchase plans were outlined at a public meeting of ratepayers in October.

Don Fish, chairman of that meeting, said today he is pleased to see the lines have been clearly drawn.

"None of us is really that opposed," he said. "Progress is progress and things have to go ahead. I don't think there will be too much static."

UNABLE TO SAY

Curtis said recent discussions between the regional district and the highways department have brought agreement on the cost-sharing formula for the land purchase.

"While I am unable at this time to state just what total funds will be available to acquire the property involved, I can say that the department of highways has been more than generous in its assistance to us," he said.

"I feel it would be improper at this time to mention the total funds available because we have a number of individual negotiations to carry out with the existing land owners.

"Suffice it to say at this point that the department of highways has agreed to pick up more than 50 per cent of the total estimated cost in spite of the fact that it requires only 4½ acres for road purposes.

DEPENDS ON KIERNAN

"Of the balance it is hoped that the honorable W. K. Kiernan, minister of recreation and conservation, will approve the proposals thus clearing the way for the regional district to obtain a one-third grant towards its share of the total cost. It should be noted that the entire proposal depends on Mr. Kiernan's approval.

"We have agreed with the department that Mr. L. Moore, former chief property negotiator for the provincial government, will be our land agent."

Curtis said that once the properties are acquired the full details of the cost will be made public.

ABOUT $600,000.

While no cost figures were given by Curtis, approximate figures given to October's public meeting put the total at $600,000.

Of this, it was said then, the regional district would pay $200,000, the province $100,000 under the one-third regional parks grant and the highways department the rest which it had budgeted for its own widening plans.

When the land is acquired, the regional district will have purchased 3,195 acres under its parks program in the last five years.

Bennett's 'Ho Ho' A No No To Union

The B.C. Government Employees Union Wednesday expressed dissatisfaction with Premier Bennett's performance as Santa Claus.

John Fryer, union general secretary, said Bennett needed only to put on a Santa Claus suit and say "ho ho ho" to complete his "masquerade" Tuesday when he announced salary increases and higher pensions for government employees.

★ ★ ★

The wage increases and extra weeks' holidays for some civil servants are the result of lengthy deliberation between the union and the Civil Service Commission, Fryer said.

"He poses as the fatherly, benevolent employer, volunteering wage increases . . ." Fryer said, adding that it was indicative of the government's "anti-labor policies."

IRKED BY 'DEAR OLD GRANNY' REMARKS

Priest Hits 'Rude Rebuff' by Sandringham

The rector of St. Andrew's Cathedral said Wednesday his offer to act as mediator in the Sandringham Private Hospital strike was "rudely" rebuffed by two officials of National Nursing Homes Ltd.

Msgr. Michael O'Connell told the Victoria Labor Council Sandringham management is more interested in exploiting "dear old Granny" than in the welfare of its workers.

O'Connell, representing the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, was in Vancouer Monday for a meeting with Neil Cook, president of National Nursing Homes, and another official Donald Dewar.

O'Connell was accompanied by Mrs. Mildred Thorn, president of the Private Hospital Workers' Union, and organizer Jim Beaubien.

RIGHT QUESTIONED

Cook and Dewar apparently questioned his right as a church official to be involved in the dispute. O'Connell said he wanted to help resolve the strike while guaranteeing the rights of workers to decent working conditions and the right of management to a fair profit.

He said the management position on a union, as defined by Cook and Dewar, was roughly as follows:

The Sandringham can't afford to pay higher wages. But unions always demand higher wages. Therefore, any attempt to organize must be resisted.

If the hospital is losing money, O'Connell said, it must be due to inefficient management because three other local private hospitals which signed union contracts have not suffered financially.

'ANNOYED ME'

"One thing that annoyed me very much was that 'dear old Granny' was mentioned about 10 times, and I would submit that anyone who doesn't care about Judy walking the picket line doesn't have much concern for Granny either."

O'Connell said the dispute was brought about by "irresponsible and unenlightened self-interest of capitalists."

Those who replaced the strikers are actually hindering the process of getting better working conditions, he said, and he urged labor to increase its efforts on behalf of the strikers.

"If this strike fails . . . it's just possible many other people will be discouraged in their efforts to obtain fair working conditions."

Cook, contacted in Vancouver today, declined to comment on O'Connell's remarks.

MAYOR QUERIED

The Labor Council passed a motion calling on the B.C. Federation of Labor and the Canadian Labor Congress to bring pressure on National Nursing Homes establishments across Canada to sign agreements.

In other Sandringham developments, Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan has written a letter to Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford requesting special permission for a representative of the strikers to address a public hearing Monday on a National Nursing Homes application to build a $4 million retirement centre.

Mayor Elford said last week only persons with an interest in the property can speak.

"The mayor of Oak Bay seems to think the only important thing is bringing in capital," Ryan commented Wednesday.

The Carpenters Union is circulating a petition, copies of which will be sent to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, urging the provincial government to take treatment of B.C.'s chronically ill out of private hands.

The Labor Council is organizing a New Year's Eve benefit dance for the strikers. The dance will be held in the Union Centre.

On Friday evening some union representatives will join the strikers to distribute leaflets on the strike in Greater Victoria shopping centres.

HOOD DECIDES AGAINST RECOUNT

Victoria aldermanic candidate Alfred Hood said today he has decided against seeking a judicial recount of Saturday's election in which he missed a seat on council by 15 votes.

Hood said he made the decision after "very, very careful thought." He had earlier said he might seek a recount because of the slim margin separating him and Ald. Tom Christie.

The final three recounts conducted by the returning officer were so close that there was "little chance" a judicial recount would change the outcome, Hood said.

'WE'VE GOT ALL WE CAN'

Appeal Ends $57,000 Short

The 1970 United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal has ended with a $57,000 shortfall, campaign chairman Commodore R. V. Henning announced today.

Henning said he will report to a meeting of the Community Chest board of directors today the campaign raised $644,000, 92 per cent of its $701,314 goal. This year's total is $20,000 less than what the Appeal raised last year and marks the third consecutive time the drive has ended short.

"I'm not happy with the results," Henning said, "but I am happy with the support that all the campaign team gave and the various media. As far as I'm concerned, we've got just about all what we can hope to get this year."

Community Chest president Alan Cox said the board will decide how the shortfall will affect budgets of the 26-member agencies.

He would not say whether the board would recommend budget cuts this year. The Community Chest has never had to cut agency budgets before.

Arthur Mayse . . .

A COMMITTEE WITH more sense than its critics recommends a pay increase for members of Parliament, and at once the poor-mouthing commences.

"Why should they get a raise? They're paid too much already!"

Or, "With so many people out of work, they should put the money into welfare."

Or yet again, "Pay them more for what? To sit around and do nothing?"

Such sentiments, whether voiced by Premier Bennett or the toiler whose union has bargained him into an upped hour-rate, have a fine, virtuous ring. But they ignore certain facts, and leap to some unwarranted conclusions.

One of these is that the MP, whether representing his constituents at Ottawa or tramping the home turf between sessions, enjoys a life of cushioned ease.

He doesn't. Believe it or not, he works. And the chances are that he works harder and for longer hours as an elected representative than he was ever required to do as a private citizen.

From time to time over the years, it has become necessary for me to borrow a snatch of some MP's time. My strongest impression from these encounters was that time was what he could least spare.

His telephone would ring, or someone else would be waiting to discuss with him, or he had a meeting coming up, or his party whip needed him to help make a quorum.

I am not bleeding for the MP. After all, he volunteered for the position, and presumably he did so with his eyes open. I merely suggest that Anderson, Groos and their colleagues in Commons earn their take-home pay.

Sure, it's money provided from our hard-earned taxes. One alternative would be to elect only tycoons willing to serve for free and absorb their own expenses. Or we might even dispense with Parliament and turn government over to the senior civil servants. Somehow, though, those notions don't appeal to me.

Most members are by no means wealthy and are likely to find themselves even less so when they depart from office. It costs to maintain split residence: a house in the home town, and even halfway adequate quarters in expensive Ottawa. Ask any married MP's wife.

There are other costs, a swarm of them and too often the parliamentary allotment for expenses won't stretch to cover these.

I'm not sure, however, that such considerations aren't beside the point.

Think of Canada as a corporation with 21 million shareholders—a figure that is bound to increase radically with the years. Also, think if you will of your federal government as a head office in which Parliament functions as directorate.

What we have here is big business: gigantic in fact, and charged with the making of decisions weightier far than any demanded of private enterprise.

As an investor in Canada, I want the best men available on the board. Further, I am cynical enough to realize that if we want the best, we had better be prepared to offer adequate tangible inducements along with the opportunity to perform public service.

I do not make this suggestion from a spirit of sweet charity. I'm also well aware that under our system of free elections, Parliament is cursed with its share of incompetents (sent there by over-impressionable voters who mistook wind for substance).

But by and large, I think we are served better than the present MP salary of $12,000 a year plus a less-than-adequate $6,000 expense account justifies.

We can't match the basic $42,000 a year which the United States pays its federal congressmen. Still, I think that at least we can well afford a more businesslike approach to the Canadian MP's salary.

We should expect him to work like the very devil for our corporation. We should be prepared to criticize him when he doesn't do so. If he fails to shape up, we should put him out of office by denying him our votes at the next election.

But while he's an executive in our employ, we should find the business savvy to pay him better than the peanuts he rates today.

BLACK GRADUATE SHOOTS FROM THE HIP

Need to Help Youth Inspires Policewoman

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The first black woman on the Oakland police force packs a .38-calibre revolver and can throw a 200-pound man — but she's more interested in helping youths than shooting criminals.

Attractive 23-year-old Saundra Brown graduates Friday near the top of her class in the Police Academy after 15 weeks of criminal law, report writing, first aid, firearms training and defensive tactics.

Miss Brown, who alternates black and red wigs with her neat natural hairdo, was born and raised in this city of 358,000 across the bay from San Francisco.

A graduate of Fresno State College with a degree in sociology, Miss Brown was working as an insurance claims representative in San Francisco when she heard that Oakland was looking for a black policewoman.

One reason she tried for the job, she said, was the need for more minority policemen in this city where the Black Panther party was founded and the population is more than one-third Negro.

The force of 710 now has 36 black policemen and seven policewomen, all white.

Recipes Omit Elbow Grease

NEW YORK (AP) — Julia Child, "the French chef" of American television and co-author of Mastering the Art of French Cooking, once had a dream of becoming a novelist.

A little later she had a romantic wish to be a spy.

But now she considers herself a teacher and likes it—teaching Americans the joys of French cuisine.

The recently-published second volume of her book, in which her collaborator was her French friend, Simone Beck, gives evidence that Mrs. Child's viewpoint has changed a bit since the first volume, which has sold 700,000 copies since 1961.

It is more relaxed.

The first volume reflected "the old tradition of French cooking" and in the introduction to Volume II, the authors admit it had "a rather holy and Victorian feeling about the virtues of sweat and elbow grease."

They say if they "make it hard to cook through snobbish insistence on always beating egg whites by hand in a copper bowl . . . we know we have already lost a great part of our audience."

The second volume allows some shortcuts.

It takes full advantage of modern mechanical means—mixers, beaters, blenders—especially for desserts and cakes.

It also permits, for certain recipes, the use of frozen or canned ingredients.

For asparagus soup, the frozen kind may be used. Canned crab is all right, but canned lobster just doesn't work.

JULIA CHILD

Mrs. Child qualified her position on mechanical devises in an interview by saying care must be taken if the results are to be up to par.

"I was lucky to be in France while the old traditions and tastes still ruled," she said.

"So I know what a certain dish is supposed to taste like. But my feeling is a very pragmatic one.

"It is balderdash to hang on to the copper bowl."

Mrs. Child grew up in California without any particular interest in cooking of any style.

When the Second World War came along, she joined in Washington the Office of Strategic Services, the cloak-and-dagger forerunner of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The OSS sent her to Ceylon and China to handle messages to and from field agents, and it was there she met her future husband, Paul Child, who also was in the OSS.

And it was in China that she learned to be food conscious.

"The military food was so bad, and the Chinese food was so good," she said.

"But I was unable to learn Chinese cooking.

"There was no time. We were working seven days a week."

Shortly after the end of the war and the return to America, she and Paul were married, and in 1948 they went to Paris, where her husband had a new assignment with the state department.

"My whole life style changed there," she recalled. "I enjoyed learning from the French to take time to live a little.

"It was an eye-opener in many ways."

Becoming interested in French cuisine, she decided to try a course at the Cordon Blue, because "I wanted to get as professional a training as possible."

She met Mlle. Beck and Louisette Bertholle, and the three of them opened a cooking school of their own in 1952.

That led to the first volume of Mastering the Art of French Cooking, and in 1963 Mrs. Child began her series for American television.

In both media she considers her main mission to be a teacher.

"I like it. I want anyone who sees my television show or uses the books to have the confidence that they can accomplish something."

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I would like to know about the gaucho pants that are being featured in the fashion magazines. Are they difficult to wear, are they for sportswear only, and what is the correct length for them?—Nancy R.

Dear Nancy,

The gaucho pants are varied, both in fabrics and accompaniments. For that "south of the border" feeling, a swashbuckling cape would be perfect, for the "frontier look," add or top with a cropped belted jacket, or lastly, for that casual country or city look, top your gaucho with an easy jacket and vest. The gaucho look is a sporty look but the imagination of designers has turned this into a rich gaucho look by the varied types of fabrics used.

Since they look best when worn with boots, I would say the length should be well below the knees, covering the tops of the boots. Anyone who looks well in a rather full A-line skirt can usually wear the gaucho pants with success.

Accept Relationship

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently our 21-year-old daughter came to us and told us that she was "in love" with another girl with whom she has been living for the past year. She said her roommate felt herself to be a "man imprisoned in a woman's body," and was contemplating a "Christine Jorgensen" operation in reverse.

After the initial shock lessened, my husband and I persuaded our daughter to remove herself from what we considered to be a lesbian environment, return home and see a psychiatrist.

Amid much weeping, she came home for four days, and after two visits to a psychiatrist, she announced that she was through with the psychiatrist. (Her roommate refused to go to a psychiatrist, saying she knew what she was, and was happy with what she was. Our daughter agreed with her.)

Our daughter has resumed living with her friend and she now expects her family, for whom she professes great love, to accept this lesbian relationship. She's invited us to her apartment and wants us to invite them both for dinner. I cannot do this. We still love our daughter, with our now broken hearts, but the situation repels us.

Any advice you can give us will be greatly appreciated. —Baffled And Broken Hearted Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: If your daugher is happy with "what she is," then you who profess to love her, must accept her as she is or not at all. Freud wrote in his famous "Letter to an American Mother" (April 9, 1935), "Homosexuality is assuredly no advantage, but it is nothing to be ashamed of, no vice, no degraduation, it cannot be classified as an illness; we consider it to be a variation of sexual functions produced by a certain arrest of sexual development."

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Jessica, just turned 18, and for her birthday she accepted a diamond from a young man she's been dating for about a year. (Bob is 22.) She really didn't want to become engaged, but Bob surprised her with the ring and she didn't want to hurt his feelings. (They never even went steady.) Now that he is pressing her for a wedding date, she is sure Bob is not for her and she has tried to give the ring back several times but he won't take it. She said he actually breaks down and cries when she tries to return the ring.

Jessica doesn't know what to do. We like the young man and even know his parents. We don't want to interfere, but something has to be done. Would it be all right if Jessica's father gave the diamond to Bob's father?—Jessica's Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: No. A girl who is old enough to accept a diamond from a young man is old enough to return it herself. And it's time Bob learned to face a few major disappointments in life without breaking into tears. It is plain that both Jessica and Bob are too immature for marriage, but only Jessica realizes it.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. (90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

MALVINA . . . "Listen to the young."

Malvina's Song Shook Vancouver Island Women

BY MICHAEL BENNETT

BERKLEY, Calif. — Meeting Malvina Reynolds is like discovering your grandmother gets stoned.

It's a culture shock.

Life for 70-year-old women often revolves around petit point and old-age pension cheques.

Not for Malvina, the Berkeley, Calif., septuagenarian who composed Little Boxes, a lyrical swipe at faceless suburbia.

She'd rather tilt at bureaucratic windmills than admit senior citizens can't fight polution, the war in Vietnam and the American dream.

Malvina lives and breathes today with the passion of a fresh-faced teen-ager and, on her, phrases such as "blew my mind," "really beautiful" and "kind of plastic" don't sound like affectations of someone afraid of growing old.

"In my songs, I try to tell people to listen to the young and what they're telling us about ourselves," said Malvina, who makes the John Birch Society see red and loves every minute of it.

"Young people are confronted with something that no one ever had to face before; the possible end of the world in which we live.

★ ★ ★

"So I tell my audiences, 'Don't be turned off by their attitudes and their dress. They may be offering us something new.' "

It took Malvina 47 years to get to the concert stage and, since then, her songs have appeared on Top 40 charts all over the world — that preserve of the under-30 set — performed by Judy Collins, Peter Seeger, the Kingston Trio, Glenn Yarborough, The Seekers, Harry Belafonte and Marianne Faithful.

"I was always somewhat musical and thought of myself as a writer," she said, brushing her snow-white hair off her forehead.

"I got to know people like Peter Seeger and Woody Guthrie who were collecting folk music in the '40s and eventually I began to write and sing my own songs."

When Malvina sings a song like Boraxo, inspired by an interview with Gov. Ronald Regan of California following the student riots at Berkeley, the lyrics come out as poison darts.

Her guitar is her bandoleer and her words her weapons; she kills with an expression.

Gene Lees, writing in High Fidelity Magazine, calls her "the sweet-sad-funny chronicler of America's dying."

★ ★ ★

"I'm trying to change my country to a direction which I am sure is a better direction than the one it's taking," she said.

"And I'm taking it on the chin. I don't know what else a patriot is. It's a person who is willing to sacrifice his well-being for the sake of his country.

"If these things can be effected before it's too late. I think there's hope. The young people who are thinking in the direction of peace and defence of the enviroment are growing up very rapidly and the old fuddy-duddies will soon be gone."

Personal conviction in the face of conformity is something she grew up with.

★ ★ ★

Her parents had opposed American involvement in the First World War and on the eve of her high school graduation, school authorities publicly embarrassed her by withholding her diploma.

That didn't stop her.

She enrolled in the University of California by special permission, received her Phi Beta Kappa pin in her junior year and a doctorate in English in the hungry '30s.

Last Aug. 23, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam invited San Francisco to a champagne buffet to help celebrate Malvina's 70th birthday.

She now limits her tours to four months a year, hitting as many college campuses, churches and women's clubs as she can. And when she speaks to women, she really gives it to them.

"Once on Vancouver Island I performed for a group made up for the most part of middle-class women in their 40s who are all hooked, in one *way or another, on cleanli*ness.

★ ★ ★

"They didn't care about what they are spewing out to corrupt the environment. So I san a song called Bloody Neat, which sums up their Lady Macbeth beauty hang-ups."

The initial reaction among younger audiences is: "Who's this old dame?" But by the time she gets into the second chorus of a song like Do You Think You've Hit Bottom, they realize you don't have to be part of the post-war baby boom to know what's happening.

Off With the Veil Means Liberation In Azerbaijan

BAKU U.S.S.R. (AP) — Zuleikha Gabinbovna Seidmamedova looks like a librarian, is a wife, mother, minister of social insurance for Azerbaijan, and a former bomber pilot.

She's an Azerbaijani woman who has "cast off her veil" — and a sign of one of the changes the Soviets have wrought since they seized power 50 years ago in this ancient Moslem land on the Caspian Sea.

Soviet officials like to point out a tall, impressive statue in a central square of Baku, the capital of Soviet Azerbaijan. It is of a Moslem woman casting off her veil.

Up to the time Azerbaijan became one of the Soviet Union's 15 republics, virtually all Azerbaijani women wore veils around the lower half of their faces — a sign of their inferior social status and subjugation by men.

Today, they say, women such as Mrs. Seidmamedova take an active role in the republic's political, economic cultural affairs. This is true to a large extent in urban areas like Baku, but it's a different story in the hinter*lands*.

Mrs. Seidmamedova had the advantage of a literate mother, one of the few literate women in Azerbaijan at the time.

She studied medicine and became a physician.

Mrs. Seidmamedova, emulating her mother's desire to be first, went to Moscow in 1938 and got permission to enter a military academy. Graduating to flight training, she was a bomber pilot in the Second World War.

She came back to Baku, married a military officer and had a son.

OTHER MADE JUMP

Other women have made the jump from social inferiority to positions of prominence.

"I was lucky, my fate was easy," says Taira Akper Kyzy Tairova, 56, who is minister of foreign affairs, although a petroleum scientist by profession.

Mrs. Tairova also had a literate mother and, consequently, advantages other Azerbaijani girls her age didn't have.

The deputy mayor of Baku is a lively, attractive brunette, Farida Khatum Kasumova. And historian Pista Azizbekova is a member of the Azerbaijan Academy of Sciences who makes more money than her husband.

But you still see many old women around Baku with black shawls pulled around their faces. In the barren countryside, parts of which have remained unchanged for centuries, women stick to their ancient role of keepers of the house and bearers of children.

Narrow Time Limit For Safe Abortions

OTTAWA (CP) — Some women have been mistakenly led to feel that they have up to the 24th week of pregnancy to get a safe abortion, the Association for the Repeal of Canadian Abortion Laws said.

The association, which says it receives up to 50 calls a week for help, says that too many women come to it after 12-weeks of the gestation period have passed.

It says the news that the *New York abortion law per*mits pregnancies to be terminated up to the 24th week of pregnancy has mistakenly led some women to feel that they have that entire period of time in which to get a safe abortion.

But while an abortion before the 12-week period is safe and simple, after 12 weeks the operation is much more complicated, causing greater risk to the woman and increasing the cost considerably, the association says.

"Women should have their pregnancies diagnosed as soon as possible and, should it be decided that the pregnancy is unwanted, immediate arrangements for an abortion should be made.

"Women should be warned against 'doing their own shopping' in New York state and urged to seek help from ARCAL or organizations who are able to provide a similar service."

Odd Topic Chosen for Maths Essays

LONDON (CP) — An essay on the theme of Mathematics and Me produced some surprising figures for a teacher in the Midlands.

Writing in The Times education supplement, the unidentified teacher says some boys in mid-teens gave the mathematics of how boys get along with girls.

It's called "the system."

"This is not the place for a detailed description," the teacher says in a small masterpiece of understatement. But he goes on:

"Low numbers indicated things like holding hands or putting the arm around his girl-friend's waist.

"At 50 however, things became much warmer and went up by a carefully graded system.

"The system went up to 100 which, my informant wrote, is rightly reserved for full intercourse. . . .

"Boys were quite open, indeed quite casual about it all.

" 'Oh yes,' one boy said, 'I've often gone 85.'

"One lad lamented that he could not persuade his partner to let him have an advance on 65.

"As at O level exams, a passing grade in British schools I suppose 45 could be regarded as borderline, or the lowest grade."

"Incidentally," the teacher bewails, "must everything be graded today?"

"Grade posts jobs, grades at O levels and now a careful grading of sexual relationships.

"To someone who has been teaching for years, it all seems inhuman. . . . It would also be interesting to know what girls think of the system.' Clearly, in some ways they control it."

Laugh Baby Laugh, an autobiography by Ann Henry (McClelland and Stewart, $6.95), fits into the rags to riches category. The Canadian television performer started life as a deprived child who didn't know it.

Her father, an unemployed romantic Scot, managed to keep his two motherless daughters with him and give them a pride in themselves that defeated the shame of poverty. They were descendents of the warlike Black Henrys and he never let them forget it.

Nostalgic scenes from her childhood are over-written but when Ann Henry describes the scenes and attitudes in welfare offices and govern*ment shelters during the 1930s* her training as a reporter on the Winnipeg Tribune saves

Food to Freeze, a Christmas Breeze

Home freezers have now become an important item in many homes. These freezers made it possible for the rural homemaker to store quantities of meat and poultry and to preserve her homegrown vegetables and fruits more conveniently than by canning or pickling.

The urban homemaker soon discovered the convenience of a home freezer although at first she bought most of the contents prepared and frozen.

As time passed such items as baked goods, casserole and even jam appeared in the freezer. When the homemaker was to become a hostess, she realized she could use her freezer to store "bake-ahead" items for entertaining.

If she knew she could make savory appetizers in November to serve six weeks later she would likely do so. The home economists of Canada Agriculture have provided three such recipes.

Each recipe uses pork and the appetizers have been acclaimed after six weeks of freezer storage.

Directions are also included for heating at serving time. The recipes for "Miniature Pork Pies" and "Spicy Pork Balls" in a zippy tomato sauce each make about 30 individual pieces, and the "Spareribs Appetizers," using 3 pounds of ribs, provide about 60 one-inch morsels.

Pork that's freezable

Pork Tips

Pork is plentiful and has been a favorite of mankind for years. In fact, for centuries. It has been said that pork was the first meat eaten by man.

Pork is always thought of as fattening. Lean portions of cooked pork contain about the same amount of calories as the lean of other meats.

Pork is at it's best when it's tender and juicy.

MINIATURE PORK PIES

1 pound lean minced pork
¼ cup chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon savory
Dash pepper
Dash cloves
1 small bay leaf
¼ cup boiling water
2 tablespoons bread crumbs
Pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie

Mix pork, onion and seasonings. Add bay leaf and water. Simmer uncovered about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove bay leaf, drain and cool. Add bread crumbs.

Line 1½-inch tart tins with pastry. Fill tart shells with 1½ teaspoons pork mixture. Cover with pastry, seal edges and cut steam vents.

Bake 15 to 20 minutes at 425 degrees F. Makes about 30.

Cool and freeze up to 6 weeks. Bake frozen 25 to 30 minutes at 425 degrees F.

SPICY PORK BALLS

Pork Balls
1½ pounds lean minced pork
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon ginger
1 beaten egg
2 tablespoons fat

Mix pork, onion, seasonings and egg. Form in 1-inch balls. Brown meat balls in fat until done (about 8 minutes). Remove from fat and drain.

Sauce.
1 cup chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 28-ounce can tomatoes
1½ teaspoons salt
1 5½-ounce can tomato paste
2 teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon oregano
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon crushed chili peppers
1 bay leaf
3 drops tabasco sauce

Drain all but 2 tablespoons fat from pan. Saute onion in fat until transparent. Add remaining ingredients, cover and simmer until thick (about 2 hours), stirring occasionally.

Pour sauce over meat balls. Makes 30.

Cool and freeze up to 6 weeks. Thaw for 45 minutes. Heat covered 15 minutes at 425 degrees F.

SPARERIB APPETIZERS

3 pounds side spareribs.
Salt and pepper.

Cut spareribs in 1-inch lengths, and into individual ribs. Bake covered 1 hour at 325 degrees F. Drain off fat.

Sauce.
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1¼ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
6 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons cornstarch

Combine ingredients. To serve, add cornstarch and cook until clear and thick. Pour over ribs.

Makes about 60.

To freeze, do not thicken sauce. Cool and freeze up to 6 weeks. Heat covered 20 minutes at 325 degrees F.

If necessary, combine cornstarch with 2 tablespoons water, add to sauce and continue heating 10 minutes longer.

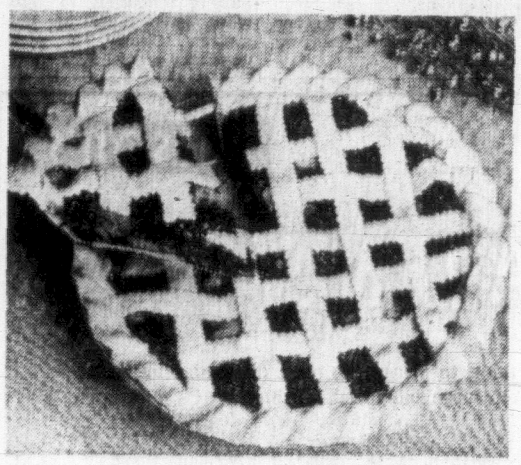
PORK CHOPS MILANAISE

6 1-inch pork chops (about 3 pounds)
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 slightly beaten egg
2 tablespoons water
½ cup dry bread crumbs
⅓ cup grated Canadian Parmesan cheese
¼ cup fat

Snip fat edge of chops. Dip chops in flour seasoned with salt and pepper, then in combined egg and water and finally in crumbs mixed with cheese.

Brown in fat 1 to 2 minutes each side. Arrange in baking dish and bake uncovered at 325 degrees F until tender (about 30 minutes for loin and rib chops, 40 minutes for shoulder chops).

Serve with spaghetti and tomato sauce. Six servings.



. . . WITH CRANBERRIES AND MINCEMEAT

A 'Crannamince' Pie Will Freeze, Too

Pies are here to be put in the freezer too. The mincemeat isn't quite standard version, but the apples, raisins, rinds and spices are there to enhance the freshly cooked cranberries.

1 cup raisins
¼ cup boiling water
¼ cup orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1½ cups cranberries
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon chopped mixed peel
⅜ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¾ cup brown sugar
1 cup chopped apples
Pastry for 2-crust, 9-inch pie
1 tablespoon butter

Bring raisins, water, orange and lemon juice to a boil. Add cranberries and continue cooking until skins begin to pop (2 to 3 minutes). Add next 8 ingredients and cool.

Line pie plate with half the pastry. Pour in filling and dot with butter.

Cover with pastry, seal edges and cut steam vents.

Bake 10 minutes at 450 degrees F; turn oven control to 350 degrees F and continue baking until pie is golden brown (25 to 30 minutes). Six servings.

today's recipes

HOT MULLED CRANBERRY CITRUS PUNCH

2 cups water
2 sticks cinnamon
1 tsp. whole cloves
½ cup sugar
1 quart cranberry juice cocktail
1 cup freshly squeezed orange juice
½ cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
Lemon slices

Combine water, spices and sugar in large saucepan; boil, uncovered, for 5 minutes. Add remaining ingredients except lemon slices; heat until warm, but do not boil. Strain. Serve in mugs with fresh lemon slices. (Makes about 1¾ quarts).

GREEN AND GOLD ZUCCHINI SPECIAL

1½ pounds of zucchini
½ cup chopped green onions and stems
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 tbsp. salad oil
½ tsp. salt
½ cup water
¼ cup dry white wine
2 tbsp. freshly squeezed lemon juice
2 to 3 oranges, separated into segments, seeded
½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Slice zucchini into thick ½-inch rounds. In large skillet, saute zucchini and onions in mixture of butter and salad oil for 5 minutes; stir frequently. Add salt, water, wine and lemon juice, cover and simmer 5 minutes. Add mandarin segments and walnuts; heat 1 minute longer until mandarins are warm. (Makes six to eight servings.)

Charles Williams is looking forward to Christmas. It will be his 108th birthday. Born Dec. 25, 1862, Williams makes his home with an adopted daughter in Kansas City and helps support himself by making quilts. He uses a cane to help him in getting around but has never needed glasses or a hearing aid.

Labor leader Michel Chartrand, who faces trial in February on charges under the War Measures Act, has won a new hearing Friday in Montreal on his application for bail. Chartrand made a joint bail petition last month with lawyer Robert Lemieux, writer Pierre Vallieres, journalist Jacques Larue-Langlois and Charges Gagnon, a former university lecturer. All five are charged with seditious conspiracy and with being members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec.

A 38-year-old Toronto waitress who won $50,000 Wednesday in a lottery sponsored by the Ontario Art Gallery, kept on working as if nothing had happened. Helen Nahirniak, who makes about $100 a week, described the win as "quite a Christmas present." She said the first news of the win came from a friend who asked to borrow some money. She said she had none to lend. "I'm all mixedup, I guess. I know I'm not going to spend it all at once but I don't have any special plans."

Lone sailor Sir Francis Chichester has run into minor technical trouble aboard his yacht Gipsy Moth V and has put back his departure for Portuguese Guinea, aides said Wednesday. Chichester plans to sail non-stop from Bissau, on Africa's west coast, to San Juan del Norte in Nicaragua, hoping to cover the 4,000 miles at 200 miles a day. This, he says, is the ultimate in high-speed sailing and something no single yachtsman has achieved before.

In a father-son contest, Austin Bramble has won control of the government of Montserrat, 37-square-mile island in the Leeward Islands of the Caribbean. Bramble's Progressive Democratic party swept all seven seats of the governing council in elections defeating the slate headed by his father William. The elder Bramble, a former union official, had headed the government 15 years. Father and son disagreed vigorously during the campaign.

The Illinois Supreme Court has ruled that Donald Lang, 22, must stand trial for murder although he is unable to hear, speak or understand sign language. Moves to implement the order came when a judge in Chicago ruled that Lang must be returned to the city from the state mental instution. Illinois law states a defendant must be able to understand the charges against him and be able to co-operate with his lawyer. The high court said hospital officials felt Lang is of normal intelligence and is therefore entitled to a trial.

A Montreal father of three who had just found his first full-time job in six months was killed Wednesday in a service station holdup which netted bandits $55. George Johnson, 32, of Suburban LaSalle, was fatally stabbed while working the overnight shift at the station. He had no life insurance. His widow told reporters her husband had a tumor near his spine and "no insurance company would touch him."

Robert Maheu testified Wednesday he felt it "very strange" that he has had no word from billionaire Howard Hughes since last September. Maheu took the stand for a second time at a Las Vegas hearing in which Hughes Tool Co., parent firm of Hughes's financial-industrial empire, seeks to terminate a court order restraining it from interference in Maheu's operation of Hughes's $300 million Nevada holdings. Hughes, 64, has not been seen in public for years, and Maheu last week testified he was concerned for Hughes' safety.

'YOU'RE FINED . . . SIR'

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Municipal Court Judge Francis E. Thomson said "Sir" to the defendant and fined him $2.75 for failing to display a current auto safety sticker on his car.

The defendant was Indiana Supreme Court Judge Roger O. Debruler.

FOR PEN-WEARY BRITONS:

Christmas Is a Want-Ad

By DAVID LANCASHIRE

LONDON (AP) — The Christmas season is in full swing in London with shoppers jamming the stores, carols in the streets — and many Merry Christmas greetings in the want-ad section of The Times.

A greetings ad in the small black type of the Times' classified columns amounts to a status symbol in Britain, where people who don't want to mail Christmas cards can pay the equivalent of $3.36 a line to say they won't be sending any.

The ads have become almost as much a tradition as Christmas cards.

"Sir Karl and Lady Parker wish all their relations and friends best wishes for Christmas and 1971," said one ad.

"They are not sending Christmas cards this year."

Some of the ads are funny, but most are dignified, saying the greeters intend to donate to charity the money they would have spent on cards, or apologizing that illness or trips kept them from sending personal messages.

One frivolous ad read: "Wombles and friends. Christmas greetings from Wimbledon. Great Uncle Bulgaria."

MAKES A SWITCH

Last year there was one with a vengeance: "Annie Merrill will not be sending Alan Herbert a Christmas card this year as he has not sent her one."

Someone named Peter Jolley reversed the procedure and placed an ad saying he was "not placing an ad in the Times this year."

"He is sending Christmas cards instead."

An even more striking status symbol is to pay an extra $1.44 a line and put the ad on the court circular page, where the doings of the Royal Family are announced.

This way the Christmas greetings, with luck, may appears under a Buckingham Palace announcement about the Queen's latest social function.

But many of the advertisers who use the court page are lords, ladies or other titleholders, and they get priority. That means a commoner's Christmas wishes are printed farther down the page.

'Jolly' Old Groan From Santa

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Emitting a jolly old groan, jolly old Santa Claus asked the big question of the overweight housewife sitting on his lap.

"And what," he asked, "can I bring you this year?"

The woman giggled: "Oh, just take away something. Like 10 pounds."

The scene was from a department store's experimental holiday switch — a Santa Claus for adults. Most call it a success.

How do presumably wise, mature grownups accept the father figure of Christmas?

There was Max Pincus, 82, who confided to Santa: "I'll tell you what I'd like, a case of scotch—oh, skip it, Santa. My doctor says no booze."

Bob Halpern, who plays Santa, promised to forget it.

A tired-looking shopper with a passel of kids asked Santa whether he would please not bring her what she got last year.

"What was that?" he asked.

"Another baby."

AN 1,100-POUND STEER did not want to go to the slaughterhouse Wednesday and gave two Calgary policemen a ride on a rope when they tried to persuade the animal to return. The steer was finally subdued at a shopping centre parking lot after being shot with a tranquilizer gun.

Windsor Press Sit-In Ends

By DENNIS BELL

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A sit-in by three mechanical unions that halted publication of The Star, this southern Ontario city's lone daily newspaper, ended Wednesday night.

About 70 union members evacuated the three-storey Star building within minutes after their union leaders told them tentative agreement had been reached on a new three-year contract.

Management would not comment. A Star spokesman said a "news blackout" has been imposed in the dispute.

The departure of the workers came two weeks after contract talks collapsed Dec. 2 and the unions occupied The Star's production facilities. The Star, with a circulation of about 89,000, halted publication.

A Star spokesman termed the work stoppage an illegal strike, but the unions just called it a sit-in.

Details of the new contract were not released, pending a union ratification vote today. But union spokesmen were jubilant over provisions concerning plant operations and manning procedures.

CLAIMS PARTIAL WIN

"We had a partial victory over manning procedures, enough to make it satisfactory," said printer Wally McCreary, who led union forces inside the plant.

"We don't regard it as a major union victory—it's a return to work.

"We regard it as a very fair settlement."

Management spokesmen had no immediate comment on the contract. A spokesman for Star publisher Mark Farrell was unable to say early today when the newspaper would resume publication.

One Star spokesman said the sit-in cost the newspaper $250,000 in advertising revenues.

The 70 printers, pressmen, mailers and stereotypers who camped alongside the presses and linotype machines for 14 days descended from the third-floor composing room cheering and flashing the V-for-victory sign.

They were greeted by about 100 wives, family members and fellow trade unionists, including Allan Heritage, international representative of the International Typographical Union and chief union strategist.

"I've got the first beer, Luke, the first beer right here for you," shouted one printer on the outside as his work-mate came down the stairs with a knapsack on his shoulder and a sleeping bag under one arm.

"This is better than Christmas," said one of the wives who hadn't seen her husband—except from a third-storey window—for two weeks. "It's already Christmas."

The unionists tramped out of the building into a chilling drizzle whooping and cheering, carrying guitars, blankets, dirty shirts, left-over food, playing cards, books and games.

"I want a bath," said one of the printers. "A hot bath. I'll even drink the bath water after if I have to."

The newspaper's 220 white-collar employees, including 100 editorial workers, were not involved and reported for work throughout the dispute despite the fact there was no newspaper to print their stories.

Instead, Star executives bought two daily half-hour radio spots on a station in nearby Leamington and had the reporters read their stories into a tape recorder.

The tapes were cut and spliced into half hours for broadcasting. Managing Editor Robert Pearson said the experiment turned up half a dozen budding broadcasters among his print men.

"Sometimes we got the feeling we were shouting at the world and nobody was listening," said Mr. Pearson.

Ratification of Pact With GM Expected as Union Begins Vote

TORONTO (CP) — A three-year agreement, with an immediate pay increase of almost 15 per cent, seemed likely to end the General Motors of Canada Ltd. strike today.

Ratification votes were to be held this morning in Ontario and at St. Therese, Que. The decision of the 23,500 striking members of the United Auto Workers union is expected to be available tonight.

The new agreement, announced Wednesday afternoon by UAW and GM officials, was almost assured of approval by union officials.

Otherwise, workers who have lost an average $2,000 in wages during the strike that began three months ago face a bleak Christmas.

If the new contract is approved GM will be back in production Monday.

Company and union spokesmen refused to give details on the proposal until the ratification meetings start, but sources say the agreement calls for a base rate in Canada of $4.12 an hour for assemblers, the largest category of workers.

MADE $3.59

Before the strike started Sept. 15, GM workers in Canada and the United States were earning $3.59 an hour.

The Canadian proposal does not call for a five-cent cost-of-living float on top of the base rate and is therefore 13 to 18 cents below parity with American workers. They settled last month for $4.25 an hour plus a five-cent float.

Canadian workers are to receive base-rate parity in December next year through increases to $4.15 an hour in September and $4.25 an hour in December.

Rates in Canada and the United States will then be increased by three per cent in each of the second and third years of the contract.

The Canadian union also got an agreement from the company to pay cost-of-living increases at the rate of one cent an hour for every 0.4 increase in the Canadian cost-of-living index based on the value of a dollar in 1961.

General Motors wanted the cost-of-living clause based on 0.6 increases in the old index, based on 1949 prices.

GAVE CONCESSION

But to get the 18 cents needed to reach parity by the end of 1971, the union had to give GM a concession which allows the company to recover up to 13 cents from cost-of-living increases in the final two years.

By the end of the new contract, Canadian assemblers would be making $4.51 an hour plus any cost-of-living increase above 13 cents.

The union also got increases in the company pension plan and obtained a supplementary unemployment benefits agreement which one union official described as "a victory in itself."

The language-rights issue at St. Therese, Que., developed into an impasse and the union agreed to take it off the table. Officials of the St. Therese local concurred when they were assured discussions on the subject would continue at the plant when workers are back on the job.

New Bill to Force Bilingual Labels

OTTAWA (CP) — French-Canadians will have a better idea what they are buying and English-Canadians will be able to round out their breakfast-table French courses under consumer product regulations given second reading in the Commons Wednesday.

Members gave second reading to four government bills in a pre-Christmas rush, including one that will make it an offence after 1975 to sell most Canadian products and imports without bilingual labels.

Today debate resumes on a bill to fix basic old-age pensions at $80 a month and increase supplementary pensions.

HAS OTHER MEASURES

Other proposed measures given second reading Wednesday and sent to committee were:

—A bill to give the Dominion Bureau of Statistics access to tax returns and a new name—Statistics Canada;

—A bill to allow the use of the metric system for legal measurement in Canada, which also would allow the federal government to set accuracy standards for measuring devices such as scales, automobile mileage indicators and parking meters;

A bill to repeal the Leprosy Act—which provides for quarantine and treatment—on the grounds that medical advancement has eradicated much of the leprosy problems and made treatment possible at regular hospitals.

Two other bills were given third reading, and now need only royal assent to become law since they have been passed by the Senate.

They were a bill extending the jurisdiction of the Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Co. to the year 2020 from 1992 and a bill to strengthen the Anti-dumping Act.

WILL WANT MORE

Speaking on the labelling and packaging bill, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said that over the next few years bilingual labels will progressively be required on all consumer products subject to federal labelling rules, except those where "undue hardship" would be caused by the regulation.

False labelling would become a general offence and would apply to pictures on packages or labels, with offenders subject to fines up to $10,000.

Full Rights Granted

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — The Swedish legislature passed a bill Wednesday giving adopted children full rights of inheritance in their new families.

Governments Agree On Indian Committee

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta and federal governments have agreed to join Indians on two committees designed to work out solutions to problems of the province's native people, it was announced Wednesday night.

Two committees will be formed, one for planning and research, the other for specific problems arising from the Indian Act or other federal or provincial legislation, said Harold Cardinal, president of the Indian Association of Alberta.

Premier Harry Strom said the provincial government would have to study the legal obligations between the federal government and treaty Indians and the rights native people can expect as residents of Alberta.

Commenting on the inclusion of both levels of government in the committees, Mr. Cardinal said the routine of "going to one and being told it's the other guy's football will end with these committees."

The announcement came after a meeting between Mr. Cardinal, Mr. Strom and Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien.

BOTH DISILLUSIONMENT AND ACHIEVEMENT

Mixed Feeling as UN Session Ends

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The silver anniversary session of the 127-country United Nations General Assembly was scheduled to end today with most countries feeling a mixture of disillusionment and achievement.

The session was one of the most unusual in the 25-year history of the world organization.

It is doubtful that any two assessments of the three months of talk that started Sept. 15 would agree.

Secretary-General U Thant had seen the session as an opportunity for summitry. But it soon became apparent that only some of the major powers would send their leaders for top-level talks and the East-West cold war made such talks impossible.

One highly-respected Western diplomat said that the assembly saw evidence of a growing feeling that violence is the solution to political problems.

But the assembly had some notable achievements. Canadian Ambassador Yvon Beaulne and many others feel that the first of these must be the Declaration of the Strategy of the Second Development Decade.

This committed many governments, those such as Canada that have given aid for years, and the Soviet bloc which has given little, to the principle of increasing help for the underdeveloped.

The strategy was a triumph for Canada, for it had much to do with its formulation.

And the assembly saw Communist China make a great stride towards membership here. The assembly for the first time gave a majority to a resolution calling for the expulsion of Nationalist China and its replacement with the Communists.

The majority was not enough for passage of the resolution; two-thirds of the votes was required.

But most of the world's major problems—from the Middle East crisis to Vietnam—came no closer to a real solution.

AMBASSADOR HAPPY

Beaulne told reporters he is happy with the work of the Canadian mission.

He said there was approval of a treaty to disarm the seabed, agreement on a Treaty of Friendly Relations—which codified much international law—progress in the field of environment and approval of Canada's proposals on the streamlining of the UN procedures.

Canada played a critical role in getting broad agreement for holding the conference.

The Canadian mission provided reporters with a paper that showed that its actions closely followed the principles laid down in Canada's foreign policy review that was released earlier this year.

It noted:

—Its role in almost 30 resolutions dealing with social and economic development.

—It had taken an active role in the area of peacekeeping and co-sponsored a resolution that set a May, 1971, deadline on the Soviet Union and the United States to work out their differences on this matter.

Also in the area of peace and security, Canada had taken a major role in de-fusing a Soviet proposed Declaration on Measures for the Strengthening of International Security. This was regarded by many as a propaganda instrument that would have, if the Soviets had their way, virtually legalized the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, among other things.

—Canada showed a "balanced" approach to the problems of southern Africa. It had supported five of seven resolutions and came in later with support for a sixth—that of calling for the end of the sale of spare parts to military equipment to South Africa.

PROGRESS AND PEACE

"Support for the other resolutions illustrated Canada's belief in progress being made against apartheid through peaceful means such as the dissemination of information," the paper said.

At the same time, Canada did not go all the way with the Afro-Asians on this question.

—Maurice Strong, formerly president of the Canadian International Development Agency, became secretary-general of the World Environment Conference to be held in Stockholm in 1973.

—Canada worked hard to promote the use of the French language here, particularly by the Office of Public Information. It and other French-speaking countries were successful in having OPI establish a French-language unit.

—Its proposal for modernization of the procedures of the UN—cutting down on words and paper work and redundant debate—was accepted by the assembly and a commission of 31 was established to investigate the matter between sessions.

Thousands Flee Terror Outburst

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new outburst of guerrilla terrorism in the Ethiopian province of Eritrea has sent thousands of women and children fleeing into neighboring Sudan within the last two months.

Eritrea runs along the western coast of the Red Sea from Ethiopia's border with the Sudan to the Gulf of Aden.

Wednesday, the Ethiopian government proclaimed a state of emergency for two-thirds of Eritrea to maintain law and order "in the face of infiltration by bandits supported by foreign governments."

Guerrilla rebels, fighting force of the Eritrean Liberation Front, are lined up in an eight-year-old insurgency against the government of Emperor Haile Selassie. Their Arab states backers, including Syria and Libya, have Soviet and, in some cases, Chinese support.

Selassie's government has received U.S. military and economic aid for years. A U.S. military advisory group of 100 men is stationed in Ethiopia, but officials here insist American guerrilla warfare experts, particularly Green Berets, are not involved in the country's problems.

My Lai Sweep 'a Party' Witness Tells Army Trial

FORT BENNING, Ga. (Reuter) — Capt. Ernest Medina, who commanded the sweep through My Lai, called it a party and told his men he didn't want to see anyone living except American soldiers when it was over, a defence witness testified Wednesday.

The witness, Thomas Kinch, 24, of North Cape May, N.J., gave the testimony at the My Lai trial of Lieut. William Calley. At the time of the incident he was a mortarman assigned to follow the captain closely.

Kinch said Medina ordered everyone in My Lai killed during the operation in March, 1968.

Defence lawyers have called 13 witnesses who testified Medina ordered the village and all its inhabitants wiped out regardless of age or sex. The defence maintains Calley, who is charged with killing 102 civilians, was following orders.

The army today reopens its investigation at Fort McPherson, Ga., to determine if Medina should be court-martialled. The army has charged him with the over-all responsibility for the deaths in the village.

DENIED BY MEDINA

At a Pentagon news conference a year ago Medina said: "I did not order any massacre in My Lai, I did not see any massacre in My Lai."

Kinch said Medina told his men he wanted all "hootches (homes) burned, livestock killed off, and when he came through the next day, he didn't want to see anyone living except GIs."

Kinch said Medina ordered his men to cease firing by telling them on the company radio: "The party's over. That's enough shooting for the day."

He said he then saw Medina walk to a ditch containing the bodies of 30 to 50 persons, whom the prosecution charged were civilians murdered by Calley. Medina has maintained he never saw such a sight.

That night, Kinch said, he saw Medina and Capt. Eugene Kotouc, an intelligence officer, questioning a Viet Cong suspect. Kotouc threatened to cut off the man's finger, and finally he did, Kinch said.

A few hours later two South Vietnamese policemen executed the suspect along with another person believed to have been a Viet Cong, he added.

The Poinsettia

The only major Christmas tradition originating in North America, the colorful poinsettia was "discovered" in Mexico by the American diplomat, J.R. Poinsett, in the early 19th century. Mexicans call the plant "Flower of the Holy Night". Legend says the green plant with the red leaves grew where the tears of a poor boy fell on the earth as he knelt in prayer before a church.

Decision Reserved

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Court of Appeal has reserved decision on a question posed by the province concerning the right to control the sale of eggs and poultry. The two-day hearing, which ended Wednesday, is the sequel to an unsuccessful attempt by the province to bring the whole issue of interprovincial trading before the Supreme Court of Canada.

★ ★ ★

Ultimatum Given

WINNIPEG (CP) — Motor Coach Industries Ltd. has threatened to leave Manitoba unless its 600 striking employees agree to a 21 per cent salary increase over three years.

"If the workers demands become prohibitive then it just might be necessary that we leave the province," said Harry Zoltok, manager of the Winnipeg bus-making company.

Motor Coach is a subsidiary of the Grehyound Corporation of Chicago.

Animals Dying

CALGARY (CP) — lack of space at the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has resulted in the premature death of more than 100 pets a month, SPCA officials said today.

"The Calgary building needs a 50-per-cent increase in space for the animals," Leon Neilsen, shelter director, said.

35th to Die

CALGARY (CP) — Kimberly Mann, 10, of Calgary died in hospital Wednesday from injuries she suffered after being hit by a car last Friday.

She became the city's 35th traffic fatality this year, one short of the 1969 mark.

Muzzling Charged

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta opposition leader Peter Lougheed said Wednesday the Social Credit government is muzzling civil servants in an attempt to hide "embarrassing facts" about the ecological effects of the W. A. C. Bennett dam in northern British Columbia.

"O Little Town of Bethlehem"

Both words and music of this carol were written just before Christmas in 1868 to be sung by children of a Philadelphia Sunday School. The words were written by Dr. Phillips Brooks, the young minister. They were inspired by his Christmas eve visit to Bethlehem in 1865. The organist, Lewis Redner, composed the music on Christmas eve.

Police Court

Sewa Singh Guray, 38, of 1282 Denman, Wednesday was committed to trial for non-capital murder.

The preliminary hearing took 2½ days. No application was made for bail. Trial is expected in late January.

Guray is charged with having shot to death Hardev Singh Gill, 29, of New Westminster, in Victoria Nov. 7.

Myrtle Audrey Blondin, 48, of 1321 Sussex, pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler to theft under $50 and was fined $250.

She was charged Dec. 15 with having taken three towels, a candle and a pair of scissors from The Bay.

A Bay security officer testified that the accused had $100 in her purse when she was stopped outside the store.

James Wilfred Birtwhistle, of 613 Sturdee, pleaded guilty to charges of causing a disturbance and wilful damage. Ostler fined him $35 on each charge.

The incidents occurred in Esquimalt Dec. 6.

Dawyne Forrest, 74 Simms, was sentenced to five months definite and 12 months indefinite in Oakalla prison on a charge of trafficking in LSD.

It was his first offence. Defence counsel Michael Ellis told Ostler his client had become "scared and repentant" as a result of his arrest and intended to develop his skills in arts and crafts.

Ellis sought a suspended sentence and probation. Ostler replied that appeal court has said probation for trafficking should be given "only in the most exceptional cases."

The appeal court, he said, has emphasized deterrence in trafficking cases. Ostler said he would recommend the sentence be served at the Boulder Bay forestry camp.

★ ★ ★

Robert Archie Sanderson, 19, of 940 Queens, received a suspended sentence and was placed on one-year probation by Ostler for attempted theft under $50.

"Foolishly you've got yourself a criminal record; otherwise you seem to be a pretty good fellow," Ostler said.

★ ★ ★

Pleading guilty to a charge of impaired driving before traffic court Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre, Cecil J. McCarthy, 46, of 612 Strandlund, was fined $300 and had his licence suspended for three months.

St. Jorre ruled McCarthy could drive to and from work.

St. Jorre fined David W. Ralphs, 19, of 1125 Leonard, $250 for possession of a restricted drug.

Ralphs was given two months to pay. When arrested by Victoria police Oct. 9, at 1750 Bay, Ralphs possessed eight caps MDA, an amphetamine compund.

★ ★ ★

A young Sooke man was set free temporarily by Ostler but elected to spend the night in jail anyway.

Dennis Shaffer, of 2091 Sooke, appeared in provincial court on a charge of perjury resulting from a conviction on a traffic offence in Sooke Oct. 27.

Due to a technicality in the drawing of the perjury charge, Ostler declared it null and told Shaffer he was free until a new charge had been drawn and a new warrant served for his arrest.

Crown Prosecutor Norman Prelypchan told Ostler he had discussed the problem with Shaffer and the accused had agreed voluntarily to stay in Victoria overnight.

He was to appear in court this morning.

Welfare Conference 'Screened'

Organizers of a national conference on welfare to be held in Toronto next month behind closed doors are ready for any outside attempt at disruption, says Victoria Low Income Group president Walter Olszewski.

Olszewski, a member of the National Advisory Council on Welfare, and several other delegates to the Jan. 7-10 conference, have been appointed "trouble-shooters" to prevent a possible invasion of the conference by the right-wing Edmund Burke Society.

Their job will be to screen people entering the conference area.

Most of the 300-odd delegates to the conference have been chosen from among the ranks of the poor. Some of the topics to be covered include the law and the poor, the Canada Assistance Plan, housing and deserted wives.

Press and members of the public will be allowed to attend an open hearing at the end of the conference.

New Code of Rules Set for Jail Staff

Tough rules of conduct for B.C. jail staff have been codified in provincial regulations.

Selwyn Rocksborough Smith, director of corrections, said the regulations will make clear to prison staff what standards they should follow, but added that the rules contain no specifically new restrictions on behavior.

The rules set out 16 types of offences for which prison staff can be investigated and punished.

"Improper relations" with a prisoner is defined as including the use of "obscene, insulting or abusive" language to prisoners.

"Trafficking" is described as including business transactions on behalf of or with prisoners or ex-prisoners or their friends or relatives.

Acting in a manner "calculated to provoke a prisoner" or using undue force with prisoners are also prohibited.

Rules against unauthorized talking to press, radio or television are also restated. The making of other public disclosures of information gained while on duty is tightened up in the new regulations.

The Christmas Candle

In medieval Europe a huge Christmas candle was burned to celebrate the festivities each night until Twelfth Night. As it was considered bad luck if the candle burned out before the Twelfth Night, slow-burning beeswax tapers were preferred. The beeswax, product of virgin bees, was symbolic of purity.

Region Can't Ban View Royal Building

The Capital Regional District board does not have the authority to place a general ban on issuing building permits in View Royal, the board's solicitor, D. A. M. Patterson, advised Wednesday.

The request to stop building came from Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, who said sewage disposal in View Royal constitutes a health hazard.

ARRANGE MEETING

He said it is apparent, under existing laws and regulations, that whitbread "can effectively prevent building in the unorganized area of View Royal by refusing to issue sewage disposal permits in that area."

The regional board agreed to:

1. Send a copy of the legal opinion to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health;

2. Endorse a letter from View Royal director Al Beasley on disposal problems;

3. Arrange a meeting between officials of the regional district and the health board.

Beasley, in a letter to Whitbread, said a pollution problem exists in View Royal and must be dealt with.

He pointed out the regional board has zoned the area for single family dwellings only because the health board gave authority for permits for a 38-unit condominium project and a 12-suite apartment, both projects on septic tanks which "cannot possibly work efficiently over any length of time."

Beasley said letters like Whitbread's delay progress towards convincing people that sewers are needed because "people like to make their own decisions without threats from the health department."

He said each lot for a single family dwelling should be judged on its own merits and if the lot passes the percolation test, a building permit should be issued.

'BASKETS CLUTTERED'

Regional district engineer, Bill Gerry, said as things stand "any person can produce results of percolation tests . . . as long as results are produced, then the health department is compelled to issue approval. This may be part of the trap Dr. Whitbread finds himself in. Municipalities have been forced to do tests themselves"

District chairman High Curtis said Whitbread has "cluttered nine in-baskets with this letter without bothering to check the powers of the regional district."

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, saying she did not necessarily subscribe to these views, said Whitbread feels there is getting to be a comulative flow from septic tanks which is unhealthy to the area. The board, she said, could impose a 10-acre subdivision minimum.

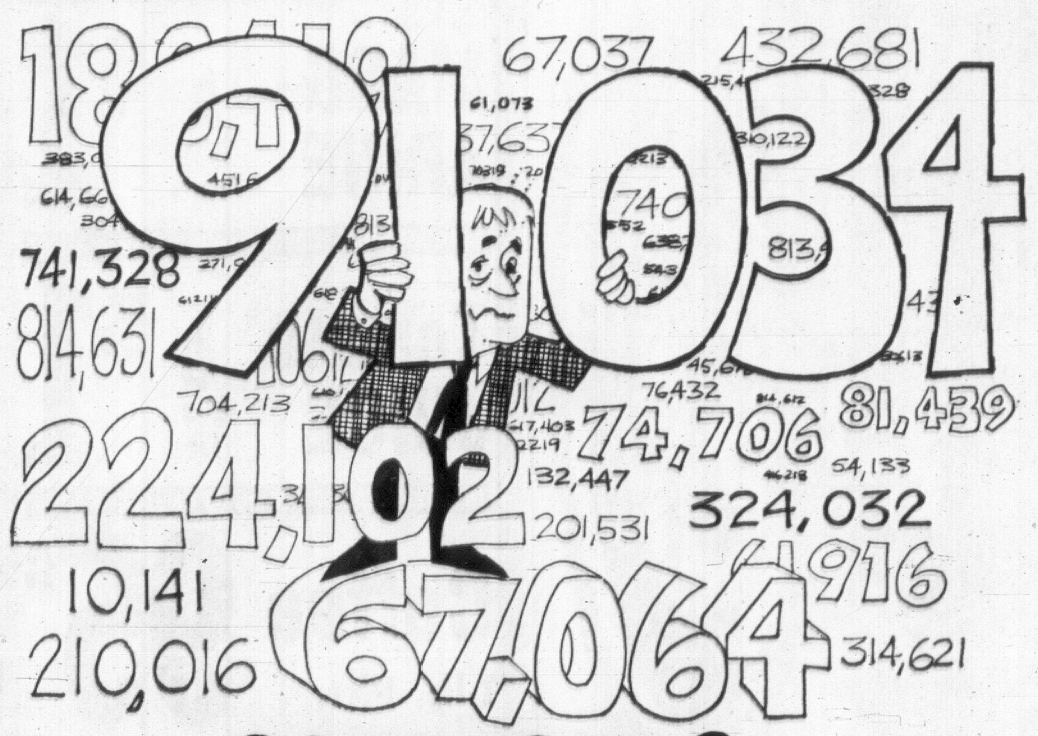
memo to advertisers



CONFUSED?

Sometimes it is difficult to find your way through all the claims and counter-claims of advertising media.

But there is one no-nonsense report that tells it exactly like it is—not like we (or anyone else) dreams it to be.

That's the report of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, an advertiser controlled circulation fact-finding and fact-reporting organization.

Next time you question a circulation claim, just ask to see proof—the ABC report.

And that's a fact, for sure.

Victoria Daily Newspapers

As a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, our circulation records and practices are subject to the scrutiny of regular field audits and the discipline of ABC-determined standards.

★ ★ ★

MATT LINCOLN. 7:30 p.m., Channel 4. This is ladies night for this series and the distaff set of Vincent Edwards fans had better have a good supply of handkerchiefs on hand. Tonight, Matt falls in love. She's a comely widow whose little girl he saves from drowning. His love-at-first-sight situation doesn't fall on unfertile ground. She reciprocates, and in a short time wedding bells are being ordered. There is a problem, however. It's medical, it's serious.

★ ★ ★

THE FLIP WILSON SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Sid Caesar and Bobby Darin are tonight's guest stars with Sid given top billing in terms of time on screen. He plays everything from a has-been fighter with an orphan (Flip) on his doorstep to Dr. Jekyll with Flip as Mr. Hyde. Oon the musical side, Bobby sings "Gabriel," which is worth the price of admission, while added guest B. B. King sings and plays "Sweet Sixteen" and Flip joins Bobby and Sid for "Noises in the Street."

★ ★ ★

IRONSIDE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "This Could Blow Your Mind." This is one of the better, if not the best, of this season for this series and the acting of Bradford Dillman and George Grizzard has much to do with that rating. Dillman is a psychologist experimenting in mental stress and its effects in breaking a man down. Grizzard is a gangster with a contract to kill an informer who is held incommunicado by the law. His plan is to kidnap the psychologist's family. The ransom is information on the informer and Chief Ironside is to be the victim of the psychologists's mental stress tactics.

★ ★ ★

THE DEAN MARTIN SHOW. 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10, Channel 5. Glen Campbell, Dom Deluise and Gale Gordon and the Golddiggers combine with Dean for another sparkling hour. There's a good study in contrasts when Dean and Glen duet a medley, and a good study in sophisticated burlesque as Dom destroys a restaurant as a dedicated waiter intent on killing a fly. Dean does his western bit as the old doc who needs five fingers of red-eye before even thinking about removing the arrow from his newest impatient patient, played by Glen.

★ ★ ★

THE THURSDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 7. "Where Angels Go . . . Troubles Follow" (1968). (Repeat.) Rosalind Russell is back as the Mother Superior in another light-hearted comedy with an all-too predictable social message. Her young charges have been aroused by a progressive young nun who wants them to get involved in the social, cultural and political issues of the day. The Mother Superior is against such activity, particularly when a youth rally is scheduled. But she is overruled by her bishop (would you believe Arthur Godfrey?) and is forced to go along. Do you care to guess the rest? Stella Stevens co-stars as the mod nun, with Binnie Barnes, Milton Berle, Van Johnson, Robert Taylor and Susan Saint James in the supporting cast.

★ ★ ★

NANCY. 9:30 p.m., Channel 7. For a rather good example of what can kill a series, but for no other reason, tune in here. Nancy and Adam decide to go their separate ways, to fulfil their own individual needs, for at least an occasional evening. He has a poker game and she a women's club. Both are bored to death in the absence of the other, but how are they to get gracefully over the dilemma? Wow!

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

As many people know, angina is a severe form of pain which is caused by disease in the heart or the arteries of the heart. Sometimes the person feels as if his chest were in a vise, or he may fel pain in the left side of his chest and down his left arm. It comes when the heart muscle does not have the necessary amount of blood, perhaps as when a person with a narrowed, diseased artery leading to his heart, exerts himself or does something which requires an extra surge of blood, and the blood cannot reach the heart in time. The heart muscle then cramps, and the man feels pain. If the pain comes while he is walking rapidly, he must stop and lean up against a wall, to give his heart a moment's rest.

Often if a man has a somehwat weakened heart, he can be sure of an angina if, on a very cold morning after breakfast (when part of the body's strength is taken up by digestion), he struggles to walk into a strong, icy wind, which means more strenuous activity. At other times, angina will come when a person gets excited or angry. Some anginas are so mild that they can be endured fairly easily. A person with angina is usually a man, perhaps past 40 or 50.

Sometimes, if an electrocardiogram is made, it will show no sign of disease. For many years, this was a puzzle to physicians, until Dr. Arthur Master, the great New York heart specialist, devised a method for testing the heart's capacity; he had his angina patients walk back and forth over a short series of steps. Then he tested the heart with the electrocardiograph, and there were changes typical of an overworked and somewhat weakened hart.

The angina may be brought on by strenuous exertion. It is a sign from the heart that it is being overtaxed and needs rest. Although it commonly does not have disastrous results, especially if the man heeds its warning and stops his activity to rest for a while. One of my good friend, a physician, went out to dig a bush out of his garden, and the exertion of doing this brought on an intense attack of angina and in a few minutes he was dead of a heart attack.

Generally, angina can be stopped by putting a tablet of nitroglycerine under the tongue; this drug works by opening up the arteries so that a surge of blood can flood into the heart, thereby relieving the pain.

Angina should be treated and watched by a good heart specialist. Oftentimes it warns the patient that his heart is not as strong as it should be. Any man past 50 who is free of angina when he walks against a cold wind after a heavy meal can feel encournaged that his heart is in good shape.

256 WATERFRONT PROPERTIES

WE ARE OFFERING ONE of the outstanding residential properties on the Oak Bay waterfront. Designed by the celebrated Samuel McClure, it represents one of the finest examples of his work. Built in 1928, the property has been the subject of considerable expense throughout the years.
In immaculate condition throughout, this residence is very manageable and requires the minimum of upkeep. The reception rooms are well-proportioned and there are four bedrooms with bathrooms ensuite.
This is indeed a very RARE opportunity to acquire one of the most charming waterfront residences in Oak Bay. Priced sensibly in order to effect an early sale. Eric Charman 383-9765. Charman Pacific Realty Ltd., 608 Broughton St.

Board Hears Psychiatrists' Bed Complaint

The Capital Region's hospital board is sympathetic to a complaint from Vancouver Island psychiatrists about the absence of psychiatric facilities at St. Joseph's Hospital.

"This is a problem and it has to be looked into," hospital board information officer Jim Hume said today.

"In spite of the Eric Martin Institute there should also be a holding area of psychiatric beds at St. Joseph's."

He said 15 to 20 beds would be adequate for a hospital of St. Joseph's size.

NOT ENOUGH

Federal-provincial cost sharing agreements allow a general hospital to allocate between 10 and 15 per cent of its beds for psychiatric medicine.

The Eric Martin Institute, opened 11 months ago, adequately fills needs for psychiatric beds only for the Royal Jubilee Hospital, the Vancouver Island chapter of the B.C. Medical Association's psychiatry section complains.

The psychiatrists charge the Eric Martin Institute was designed for 170 adult patients but that number was reduced to 100 by the provincial government.

DOES NOT EXIST

"The purpose of this reduction was to make the Eric Martin Institute eligible for federal cost sharing that allows for a 10 to 15 per cent psychiatric bed ratio in each general hospital," the psychiatrists say. "This reduction fulfils the recommended requirement of psychiatric beds for Royal Jubilee Hospital but the recommended 10 per cent of general hospital beds for psychiatric care does not exist for St. Joseph's Hospital."

The psychiatrists also suggested that the regional board consult them for advice when planning future hospitals in the area.

"We certainly will consult with psychiatrists in the future," Hume said.

$22,000 Fraud Case Just 'Fiddling'

Siegfried Marquardt did nothing more illegal than a businessman who tries to pad his expense account, his defence lawyer told Victoria County Court today.

Marquardt, a 28-year-old contractor, of 2841 Sea View Road, Saanich, is charged with 12 counts of defrauding VI Shipyards Ltd.

The company was set up by Marquardt to convert an old U.S. navy vessel, the Robert Emery, into a floating marine entertainment centre in San Francisco. The amount involved in the charges is $22,000.

Lawyer David Williams said the accused had admitted "fiddling" with company records in an attempt to evade income tax on any profits the Emery venture might produce.

"It may be a disreputable thing to try to fiddle the tax people, but every businessman who pads his expense account is doing the same thing that Marquardt has done here," Williams told Judge M. L. T. Drake.

"If I paint my office and there are a few buckets of paint left over and I take them home, am I guilty of criminal fraud? The jail's of the country would be full."

The Emery project eventually collapsed and the ship was sold for scrap. Partners with Marquardt in the venture were lawyer David Hummel and the late William Osland.

Williams said Hummel was "looking for a scapegoat" after the project failed and picked the contractor. In any case, Williams said, the crown had laid the wrong charge. If anything, he said, Marquardt should have been charged with theft from his own company.

The contractor had testified he "used the company's account as if it were my pocket book." He said he had written cheques on the VI Shipyards account at his "leisure" because he considered the money his own.

He denied the company had been set up to deal only with the Emery project. Monday from other sources might have been in the VI Shipyards account, including his own funds, Marquardt said.

The trial was expected to conclude this afternoon with the summation by prosecutor Brian Smith.

6,000 Homes On Island Lose Power

A burned-out conductor at B.C. Hydro's Langford substation stripped 6,000 homes from Langford to Port Renfrew of power Wednesday at 2 p.m.

The failure was the second in 24 hours to hit residents in the area from Saseenos to Port Renfrew.

To meet the emergency, Hydro crews energized a bypass line with electricity from the Jordan River power plant, phasing in the electricity gradually.

By 3:15 p.m. power was restored in Sooke, Jordan River and Port Renfrew.

Lights began to flicker on again at Saseenos, Colwood, Langford and Metchosin — except for a few small isolated areas — by 5:15 p.m.

Then trouble hit again.

First came a rash of brownouts, followed in many cases by further blackouts.

A Hydro spoesman said the second bout of power failures probably resulted from the power being restored at a peak demand period — during the dinner hour when many electrical appliances were being used, as well as lights.

It was 7:05 p.m. before the new difficulties were resolved.

"The trouble was compounded by the fact that another line that we could have used under normal circumstances was also out — probably through storm damage," the spokesman said.

Jaywalkers Get Toes Stomped

Victoria police have begun their annual Christmas crackdown on downtown jaywalkers.

In the last two days they have issued 100 summonses and 100 warnings.

Jaywalking and ignoring a "don't walk" light can result in a $2.50 fine.

Most of the citations have been issued at downtown intersections, mostly along Douglas Street.

Insp. Richard Berry, head of the traffic division, said the crackdown is held mainly during the Christmas rush to promote safety and smooth traffic flow.

He said two policemen will be patrolling the downtown area most of the time until Christmas. In addition to issuing summonses and warnings, they will use a loudhailer to broadcast instances of infractions.

Summonses may be paid out of court or contested in court.

Kelp Licence Extended

The provincial cabinet has granted a one-year extension on a licence held by Canada Kelp Ltd. to harvest and process seaweed in the Queen Charlottes area.

The company has been given until 1971 to attain a 10,000 ton annual production and until 1972 to reach 40,000 tons a year.

Canada Kelp is one of several related companies named in an order issued by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson in September for investigation under the Securities Act.

Vancouver lawyer Harold Hine, Peterson's brother-in-law, is a director of Canada Kelp and the other companies named in the order.

The company earlier was allowed to maintain its licence in spite of failure to pay its annual licence fees. A government source said Wednesday the fees have now been paid.

National Post For Uvic Man

A University of Victoria language professor has been elected president of a national association concerned with academic exchange.

Dr. J. Beattie MacLean, head of the department of Germanic languages and literature, was elected national president of the Canadian German Academic Exchange Association.

The association sends university students of German on academic and work scholarships to Germany each summer.

Regional Budget Adopted

The Capital Regional District board adopted a provisional 1971 budget Wednesday which shows administration expenses of $130,250 compared with $106,200 estimated for 1970.

Salaries are up $18,000 and there is a surplus of $9,750, the provisional budget showed.

Salaries include a switchboard operator and an accounting clerk to join the staff.

Highlights of the budget, subject to formal approval in 1971:

- Regional park expenditures of $674,000 compared with $727,027 in 1970;
- Centennial swimming pool, Colwood, at $89,000 compared with $85,180 in 1970. This is balanced by revenues;
- Colwood racetrack local park property, $23,500, met from requisition from Langford-Colwood;
- Engineering, $48,200 from $34,400 in 1970 which includes an extra $9,000 for salaries, reflecting a full year for the engineer and his assistant;
- Building inspection services, $73,700 from $44,800 in 1970, including an extra $26,000 in salaries reflecting full year's employment for the additional staff hired this year when the district became responsible for this function. Revenues and surplus balance the provisional expenditure;
- Regional planning, $145,950 from $118,000 including an extra $18,000 in salaries reflecting the hiring of an additional planner and a planning assistant this year.

Surrey Man Named Head Of Glendale

M. F. Hayes, of Surrey, currently business administrator of Woodlands School, has been appointed administrator of the Glendale Hospital in Saanich.

The 41-year-old Hayes, father of four school-age children, will assume his new job Feb. 1 at the 320-bed hospital which is designed to serve the needs of the mentally retarded on Vancouver Island.

He has worked in institutions operated by the department of mental health for 21 years. His appointment was announced by R. B. H. Ralfs, chairman of the board of directors of Glendale Lodge society.

Suicide Try Fails

TOKYO (Reuter) — An 18-year-old school girl jumped off the top of a nine-storey building in an apparent suicide attempt but power wires broke her fall, police said. She suffered a broken right arm and bruises.

City Acts On Welfare Work Plan

Victoria has already moved on a work-training project for employable welfare recipients.

Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt officials said today they are discussing the subject but have made no decisions.

The project is organized by the provincial rehabilitation department and includes a 13-week course of alternating work experience and academic upgrading designed to make participants better suited for regular employment.

Rehabilitation Minister P. A. Gaglardi said Wednesday he is optimistic of federal support for a similar project for private industry.

At the municipal level, pilot projects are under way in Vancouver and Langley and eight other municipalities have signified interest. The federal government would pay 50 per cent of the cost with the province and the municipality each picking up 25 per cent.

Last week, Victoria council's welfare committee gave approval in principle to a project involving 20 men and a local cost of $12,678.

The city must first design the project and submit it to senior governments for approval.

Retired Navy Officer Dies at 60

Funeral services will be held Monday at 3 p.m. in Sands' Memorial Chapel of Chimes for Lt.-Cmdr. Albert Jack Temple, RCN (Rtd.), 1243 Richardson, who died Wednesday at 60.

Born in Saskatchewan, Temple had lived in Victoria for the past 39 years.

He served in the Royal Canadian Navy during the Second World War. He was a member of the Vancouver Island branch, Naval Officers' Association, and the Trafalgar branch No. 42, Royal Canadian Legion.

He is survived by his wife, Daphne, and sons, Frank and Brian, all at home; his mother and sister, Mrs. Phyllis Temple and Mrs. Margaret Brown, both of Victoria, and two brothers, Ted, of Toronto, and Phillip, of Vancouver.

Pastor Alan McLean will officiate at Monday's service. Instead of flowers, friends are asked to donate to the Itsuaikan Orphanage, Building Fund, Aicki Ken, Japan, c-o 2303 Dowler Place, Victoria.

Oak Bay, Esquimalt Lose Weekly

The Oak Bay and Esquimalt editions of the Review, published weekly by John Manning, ceased publication today.

Manning said the paper will continue to publish in Saanich and Sidney.

He said the paper's greatest concentration of subscribers is in Saanich and the Peninsula "where increase in readership has more than tripled that of either Oak Bay or Esquimalt. In light of this expericne, present day economics simply cannot support city wide coverage."

Editor Ed Gould said financial difficulty did not lie behind the cutback in services but that it was an attempt to consolidate the operation.

Ottawa Blamed For Leaving Indians in Cold

Alberni Social Credit MLA Howard McDiarmid said Wednesday 100 Indian students in his riding won't have a school to attend next year because of federal government inaction.

McDiarmid said the government failed to make a commitment to build a school to go along with the Christie Indian school hostel it is building at Tofino.

There won't be room in area schools for the extra Indian students, he said.

The government had previously indicated it would build the needed school, McDiarmid said.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies remained clear along the north coast overnight. Elsewhere in B.C. it was cloudy with showers over the inner south coast and snowflurries in the Cariboo. Rain was reported early this morning in the Thompson and Okanagan valleys.

Chilly Arctic air which covers the Cariboo and most of the north coast will move slowly southward over the province during the next 48 hours. By noon on Friday the cold air will cover all sections of B.C. Gradual clearing will occur from the north as the Arctic air deepens. A low-pressure centre southwest of Vancouver Island will continue to weaken but will produce showers over much of the inner south coast today.

3 Missing

TERRACE (CP) — Three men were missing and presumed drowned Wednesday night, after a boat was found on the shore of the Skeena River about 30 miles east of here.

Police said the men had attempted to cross the river in the boat, apparently to pick up a moose shot earlier.

Names were withheld.

Construction Workers Shun Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia construction laborers have rejected the lastest contract offer of the Construction Labor Relations Association by a 55 per cent membership negative vote.

The 5,000 laborers voted on a contract package calling for raises of 64 cents to $1.16 an hour over a 25-month period.

Chuck Connaghan, president of the CLRA, said Wednesday "We are astonished that this proposal has been rejected." He said the offer was 10 cents higher than that proposed by the provincial government.

Bill Millner, business agent for the Laborers' Union, said the main reason for rejection was distribution of the offer.

COMPUTER PUNCHES PEACE

DETROIT (UPI) — City clerk George Edwards was severely criticized twice this year after his attempts to speed up vote counting through computerization resulted instead in unusual delays in the primary and general election returns.

Now Edwards has found a new use for the computer cards.

For Christmas, he has sent his friends pink cards with holes punched in them to make up the word, "Peace."

Indoor Bulb-Growing Problems

By HILDA BEASTALL

The failure of narcissi (the genus which includes all the different kinds of daffodils), hyacinths and crocuses to produce satisfactory flowers when grown in pots, can be traced to a number of causes. First, we must remember these groups of bulbs all bloom outdoors when the soil and the air is heavy with mosture.

Hilda

Secondly, the temperatures outdoors range, at blooming time, between 40 and 60 degrees F. .

Now, do these facts already present a few clues?

We, in our zeal to get bulbs to bloom indoors, expect them to endure a temperature between 65 and 75 deg. F., with occasional floodings of water in the pots and seldom more moisture around them than the steam from cooking supper.

With the advent of complete laundry equipment for homes, even the steam from the washing and drying of clothes in winter is lacking.

So here we are with dry, hot houses and we're trying to flower these lovely outdoor blossoms just like we did in bygone days.

When we plant narcissus bulbs in the garden before the end of September and see the flowers (here in our southern coastal climate) opening by the end of February, the bulbs have had five months of rooting and growing in cool, damp soil.

For flowering in pots for the house, we expect them to root and produce their flowers within three months. They will still do this quite well if we:

(1) choose the right varieties for the job;

(2) choose only top size, healthy bulbs;

(3) give them at least eight weeks to root in a cool, damp, and dark place before bringing them into the average house conditions.

If we consider all the environmental circumstances under which the narcissi, hyacinths and crocuses bloom outdoors we have a better chance of success with them indoors.

A little shorter rooting period, a few degrees higher temperatures will be tolerated, as will somewhat drier atmosphere but we must try not to have any of these requirements too drastically different.

Of these three spring bulbs, the least adaptable for indoor growing is the crocus. This is quite understandable, for it is the one to bloom in earliest spring when the air is cool and moist, plus a variable light intensity of cloud and sunshine. If we do succeed in blooming them indoors the flowers rarely last more than one day.

From this assortment of ideas, you may find the answers to your own indoor bulb-growing problems.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

In 1949, the president of the American Contract Bridge League was the late Dr. Louis Mark, the first Life Master in Columbus, Ohio. Dr. Mark was known as the collector of many amusing and sometimes unbelievable deals. The hand presented today is one of his gems.

The deal arose in a "social" (nonexpert) game, and the West defender was a female neophyte who had learned to play bridge about six months earlier. As will be observed, the neophyte's learning was not what one would call complete—but, as luck would have it, the incomplete knowledge paid a handsome dividend. Although I am not sure of this, I have the feeling that Dr. Mark was the South declarer.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

The bidding was normal in every respect, and the four spade contract was a very sound one. If one were to look at all four hands (without noticing what the opening lead was), he would be hard-pressed to figure out how the four spade contract went down. But it did go down—and there wasn't a thing that declarer could have done about it.

With West making the unorthodox, abnormal and "impossible" lead of the king of hearts, she produced a most amazing result.

Declarer took the king with the ace and led a low trump, which West captured with her ace. The jack of hearts was then returned, the board's queen was put up, and East ruffed. East returned a club, which West won with her ace. She then cashed the heart 10, for the setting trick.

Had West opened any heart but the king, declarer would have had no trouble in fulfilling his contract. If, for example, West had led a low heart, South would have put up dummy's queen, which would have won the trick. When he next led a trump to West's ace, West would have played back a heart, which East would have trumped. However, in this case, East would be trumping a heart trick that declarer would have had to lose anyway.

Thus, with a normal heart lead, declarer would have made winners out of both his ace and queen of hearts. His only losers would have been a trump, a heart and a club.

NO SUCCESS resulted from two search operations today in Montreal. In one police and soldiers encircled a four-block area and conducted fruitless house-by-house searches for the kidnap-killers of Pierre Laporte. A Montreal newspaper quoted a police official as saying that two French-language radio stations knew police plans in advance and broadcast some information. (CP Wirephoto).

50 YEARS OF FAILURE

Aimless Billions Spent on Science

Lack of Guidance Rapped by Senate

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Billions of Canadian dollars were committed in the 1950s to nuclear power programs, jet fighters and ballistic missiles without one meeting of the federal cabinet's chief science policy-making body.

This is an example cited by the Senate science policy committee of past performance under what it describes as Canada's "science policy by accident."

In the first volume of its report tabled Thursday, the committee says the federal government must shed 50 years of failure at molding the national science effort and replace it with a clear, comprehensive policy aimed at economic and social objectives.

Faced with a huge international technological race and with growing social problems at home, politicians and the public can no longer afford to abdicate their responsibilities to make and control science policy, it says.

For example, Canada got into nuclear power and building jet fighters and missiles between 1950 and 1958 without the cabinet committee on scientific and industrial research, the main top-level policy body, ever meeting.

Committee Dissolved in October

Since 1958, the committee had met with growing frequency —once a week this year. The report adds that the cabinet committee was dissolved by the government in October, to make way for setting up new policymaking machinery next year.

The report makes specific citations in discussing costly weapons systems developed in the 1950s, culminating in the elimination of the Avro Arrow program in 1959.

There was the Avro flying saucer, for which no cost is specified, later developed as a subsonic experimental craft under U.S. contract; the abortive Velvet Glove missile costing $24 million; and the CF-100 jet interceptor costing $146 million in federal funds before production.

Top cost, of course, was the $450 million sunk in the Arrow.

In view of the "gap at the top," says the Senate report, it is hard to see how a clear policy could result from the three policy advisory bodies—the National Research Council, the Science Council of Canada and the Economic Council of Canada.

The NRC was created in 1916, the economic council in 1961 and the science council in 1966.

NRC's Effectiveness Weakened

The study says NRC's effectiveness as an advisory agency was weakened seriously when it acquired huge laboratories in the 1930s and 1940s. It then faced a conflict of interest between offering advice and doing its own research.

The science council, it adds, has been working in a political vacuum with minimal impact on policy.

The Senate science policy committee, headed by Senator Maurice Lamontagne (L—Quebec), economist and former cabinet minister, was created in 1967. Its extensive hearings included trips to the U.S. and Europe.

Most of the specific recommendations will appear next year in a second report. One recommendation made by the first report calls for a permanent Senate committee to review major policy issues every five years and to study individual areas or problems when required.

While the 100,000-word report praises achievements and scientists of the last 50 years, it also says "the bulk of the evidence presented to the committee, including what came from the federal government sector, stressed the need for an over-all science policy."

The committee said the organization of science is the core of power in this generation, comparable with ownership of industry in the 19th

'Too Many Research Workers'

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is only three years away from producing nearly twice as many PhD research workers as there are jobs for them, says the Senate science policy committee.

The committee says there is "something fundamentally wrong with the scientific manpower situation in Canada."

"We are apparently producing undesirable surpluses in certain areas and tolerating serious gaps in others that are paralysing important research functions in government."

The report was tabled today.

Reporting on evidence from outside the government, the committee says there is evidence most holders of PhDs in science and engineering will have to find jobs in industry, either in Canada or abroad.

But it also cites evidence that industry sees too few engineers, geologists and geophysicists on the horizon.

INDUSTRY CONCERNED

And the committee says industry is concerned whether the training and attitudes of PhD graduates fits them for working in industry.

"Canadian industrialists are seriously concerned about the nature of Canada's university training."

Kidnapped Envoy Says He's Nervous

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher has sent a letter saying he is tired and nervous in guerrilla captivity and urging the government to accept his captors' demands.

The 57-year-old envoy, seized at gunpoint 11 days ago, made his appeal in a note found in a suburban bar here Wednesday along with the kidnappers.

The guerrillas reiterated their insistence on formal guarantees by the government that 70 political prisoners they want exchanged for the bachelor envoy would be flown to Chile or Algeria.

Britain Bound by 'Obligation' To Make Arms Sale—Heath

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath left little room for doubt Wednesday that Britain is disposed to honor its "obligation" to supply arms to South Africa.

But two points mentioned by Heath at a crowded news conference winding up his quickie visit here for talks with Prime Minister Trudeau suggested that the fateful decision — for the Commonwealth — will not necessarily have to be taken.

One was that South Africa has not yet applied to buy arms from Britain, though it has been several months since Heath's newly-elected government announced it was willing to consider applications.

The other was that Britain's commitment to South Africa under the Simonstown agreement could be dissolved only by mutual consent.

On both points, Heath appeared to leave open the possibility that South Africa itself will provide an out for Britain by not embarrassing it with a request for arms.

Heath visited Ottawa for part of a day on his way to Washington for talks with President Nixon today and Friday.

President Nixon and Heath settled down today to wide-ranging talks on East-West relations, NATO, the Far East and other issues.

At a formal welcoming ceremony at the White House, Heath touched on a key issue of the talks when he assured Nixon there is no incompatibility between Britain's application to join the European Common Market and Anglo-American relations.

On the contrary, he said, if Britain is admitted to the

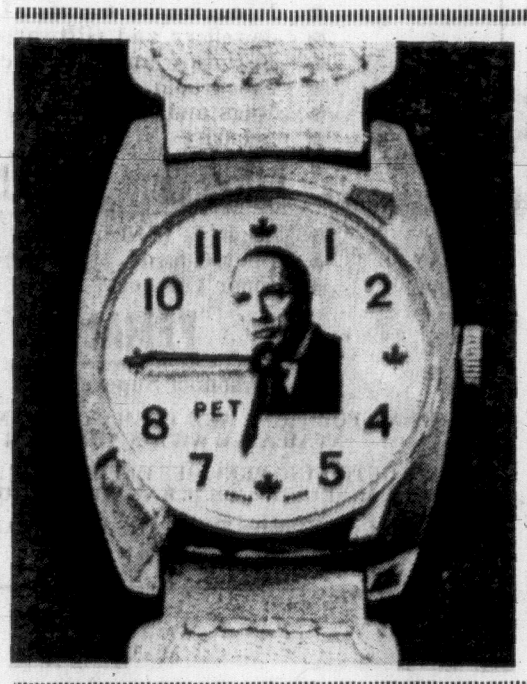
OTTAWA (CP) — Shares for public participation in Telesat Canada, putting up the country's first domestic space communications satellite, will be offered only after the satellite has achieved "successful commercial operation," it was announced today.



AND IT TELLS THE TIME

MONTREAL (CP) — Trudeau wrist watches, on sale in Montreal department stores for two weeks, are "selling splendidly," the Montreal distributor said Wednesday.

The timepiece is "not jazzy but a hell of a lot nicer," than the Spiro Agnew caricature watches sold in the United States, said a spokesman for Clef Canadian Industries.

The watch features a black-and-white photograph by Jean-Pierre Cucuel of the Prime Minister, not a caricature.

The $14.95 Swiss-made watch has red hands and a red maple leaf at each quarter hour.

Some 15,000 watches have been distributed throughout Eastern Canada and the company expects to put them on sale shortly in Western Canada, the spokesman said.

SIX PERSONS DEAD BY OFFICIAL COUNT

From Reuter-AP

WARSAW (CP) — Shipyard and other workers in Gdansk and miners in Silesia were reported on strike today after three days of riots and street fighting in Poland's Baltic ports over sharp price increases. The outbreaks were reported to have left at least six persons dead, by official count.

Other sources said the death toll was at least 12 and more than 150 persons were injured, many of them militiamen-police.

The Polish Communist party newspaper Trybuna Luda admitted for the first time that stiff pre-Christmas price increases in food, fuel and clothing announced last weekend were at the root of the trouble.

The paper, also making the first editorial comment in Poland on the clashes in Gdansk (formerly Danzig), Gdynia and Sopot said some of the workers who battled with militia still were not back at work. The paper urged them to return to their jobs.

The clashes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday left buildings burned out and stores looted, and led to tanks being brought on to the streets and a dusk-todawn curfew being clamped on the three coastal cities.

Observers said the Trybuna Luda article indicated that all was not yet well in Gdansk, although earlier Polish reports said calm and order had been restored there and in the neighboring port of Gdynia and the vacation resort of Sopot.

All three cities form an almost unbroken built-up complex stretching for about 15 miles along the Baltic coast, with a total population of more than 600,000.

Ottawa Boosts Soldier Guards

OTTAWA (CP)—The number of soldiers guarding political leaders has been increased in recent days in the national capital, officials disclosed today.

Reasons given was the belief that the Front de Liberation du Quebec might seek a "replacement hostage" for freed James Cross.

Most of the soldier-guards had been withdrawn in the Ottawa area.

But they have been returned to duty and persons who were without any guards for weeks now have them again, at least at night.

Pollution Measure Agreement Reached

WASHINGTON (WP) — House-Senate conferees reached final agreement Wednesday night on a clean air bill imposing an absolute legislative deadline of Jan. 1, 1976, for auto industry production of a virtually pollution-free engine.

The compromise measure, probably the strongest air pollution control bill ever considered by Congress, is expected to reach the House and possibly the Senate floor Friday for quick approval and transmittal to President Nixon.

Senate bill sponsor Edmund S. Muskie (D-Maine) called the measure "a good strong bill."

House commerce committee chairman Harley Staggers (D—W. Va.) called the final provisions "a reasonable compromise."

Under the final provision, the industry must come up with an engine by Jan. 1, 1975 that will reduce emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons by 90 per cent from the maximum 1970 permissible levels. The administrator of the environmental protection agency (EPA) would be empowered to grant a one-year extension, but after that no new cars could be sold that didn't meet the new standards unless Congress extended the deadline.

MONTREAL CITIZENS UNAWARE

Police Help Was Nearby

MONTREAL (CP) — For 30 consecutive nights in November, residents of the west-end Cote des Neiges district were bothered by a noisy prowling gang of tough-looking men.

Already tense because of the kidnap crisis, apartment dwellers heard strangers tramping down usually quiet corridors at 2 a.m., grabbing door handles and trying to force them open.

Burly hobos sat on the front porches of duplexes for as long as two hours. In the middle of the night, men would jump back-yard fences and try to force locks on doors.

Sergeant Andre Querton, in charge of the crime prevention section in the district, said Wednesday that not one citizen reported the incidents to police.

"People are so damned unresponsive, and coldly so, that it's unbelievable," he said. "They did absolutely nothing."

The hobos and prowlers were undercover officers conducting a survey to test residents' response to prowling incidents.

Some talk thet science in Canada is spendin' money in all directions. Thet's more of an art.

By Barry Thornton

Within days almost all Island rivers and streams will have their first major run of winter steelhead. Incidental catches have rapidly increased from almost all Island rivers as pre-season steelheaders take trial trips to perfect their tackle. Some of the larger rivers like the Gold, Campbell, Puntledge, Stamp, Nanaimo and Cowichan have already experienced minor runs and will increase in productivity as the traditional Boxing Day opening draws near.

For the beginner, steelhead are almost a myth. As a novice he may already have spent many hours on various streams fruitlessly casting in an attempt to hook one of these trophy trout — but as yet, with no success. There are no short cuts to becoming a master steelheader, nor to becoming skilled and adept at the sport of steelheading. River time is what every tyro must acquire before he will beach that first exalted fish, but the following suggestions on tackle may reduce that time.

It is interesting to note that up-Island steelheaders are generally float fishermen while south-Island steelheaders prefer drifting. The reason for the difference is hard to determine and appears to be only a matter of personal preference, which has grown with each area. Both methods are equally successful. However, every angler should eventually become adept with each method as every stream is fished best to one or the other method and in many situations to both.

Basic tackle for the float fisherman can be divided into two major catagories; the major tackle, which consists or rod, reel and line; and the terminal tackle, consisting of lures and bait and basic hook-up.

Major tackle is relatively simple but a few specific points ensures its greatest ease of use for the novice.

For float fishing it is mandatory that your rod be long. A ten-foot rod is most common with many anglers using rods up to thirteen feet. The long rod is necessary to ensure a proper drift of the float by allowing the angler to keep his line off the water. If the line is permitted on the stream surface the current quickly creates a belly which pulls the lure from the bottom away from the fish or, which inhibits a successful strike because of slack line.

Steelhead have earned the nickname "ironhead" in part because they have very tough mouth tissues. Your rod, while long and supple for greatest action, must have a stiff tip for setting the hook.

Reels are many and varied and generally depend on the angler's experience with other forms of fishing. A spinning reel allows the greatest ease for it provides a quick pick-up of slack line and greatest dexterity in some of the smaller, difficult to fish, streams and creeks. Experienced steelheaders use spinning reels because of their adaptibility but many also use single action reels like the Silex or casting reels like the Ambassador. The Silex is the preferred reel for float fishrmen for it permits more efficient presentation of float-fished bait and lures. Casting reels like the Ambassador provide for distance and is a preferred reel for large streams whether float fished or for drift fishing.

Fishing line has become so varied now that the angler need have little worry, providing he buys quality line. For winter steelhead a minimum weight for the novice would be line of fifteen pounds test with a more desirable weight being twenty pounds. The steelhead averages eight pounds and is caught in a stream also having a weight factor, which the angler must contend with when fighting his trophy. One snap of a steelhead's head is sufficient to break line weights greater than fifteen pounds.

Terminal tackle comprises a float, weights, swivel, leader, hook and bait or lure.

The most commonly used hook is a number 2-0 off-set bait hook. Many varieties are available with preference being an individual matter.

★ ★ ★

Leader line is important in float fishing for it literally gives the angler many hours more of actual on-the-stream fishing time. Leader hook-ups are prepared prior to the trip to be quickly tied to the swivel when lost. Leader should be limp monofilament and must be a few pounds less than the main line.

Weights are of two basic kinds — split shot or eared sinkers. Eared sinkers have the advantage over split shot for they do not crimp your line. They are also easy to remove and can be used over again. Medium to large split shot should be used, or medium to small eared sinkers.

Floats come in all sizes, shapes and colors. A medium-sized torpedo-shaped float is generally preferred, particularly as on the cast it creates little splash as compared with the more circular floats. Floats should have a slit opening for quick change and a bright top for visibility.

Terminal tackle should be attached as follows for best results when float fishing.

A large swivel is tied to the end of the main line with approximately two feet of leader tied to the other end of the swivel.

If fishing with roe, a barrel knot is tied to the shank of your hook with the leader threaded through the eye of the hook. Pushing the leader back through the eye will create a loop where the bait can be placed without it falling from the hook. A small strip of red wool is usually tied to the hook along with the bait for added attraction.

When fishing lures, slip them on the leader, add a small bead so the lure will not slip on the hook, then tie your hook to the end of the leader with a strong improved clinch or fisherman's knot. A small split shot should be crimped about an inch above the lure on the leader so that the lure won't slip up and down the leader.

Betsy Overcomes Error With Great Second Run

VAL D'ISERE, France (CP) — "I made a mistake and almost gave up on the first leg," Betsy Clifford, 17-year-old Ottawa skiing sensation, said after stealing the women's special slalom from the favored French girls at the Criterium de la Premier Neige Wednesday.

But "everything went beautifully in the second leg."

The Canadian high school student was in fourth place more than a full second behind first-leg leader Florence Steurer of France when she shoved off on her second run down the treacherous slopes of Solaise Peak.

"I took a chance and just went on that second one," Betsy said. "It was icy but I really made time at the top. I was using my knees and everything went great."

Miss Clifford, who at 16 became the youngest skier to win a gold medal in world competition, added the Criterium World Cup event to her giant slalom victory at Val Gardena, Italy, last February by whisking throught the second run Wednesday in 36.03 seconds.

WAS TOO CAUTIOUS

Her first run was faster — 35.60 seconds — but Miss Steurer was overcautious her second time down and the Canadian teen-ager edged the French girl on total time by 59.100ths of a second, 71.63 to 72.22 seconds.

Miss Steurer had posted a first-leg clocking of 34.26 before slowing to 37.96 over the tricky course.

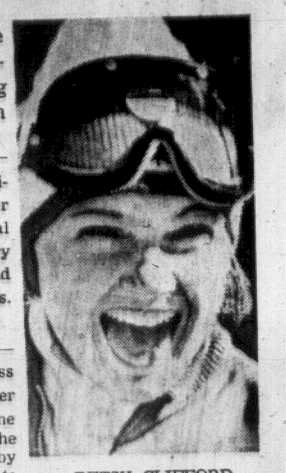
Wiltrud Drexel of Austria placed third with a combined time of 72.43 seconds; Britt Lafforgue, France, was fourth in 72.61; and Barbara Cochran, United States, fifth in 73.26.

THIRD IN CUP RACE

Judy Crawford of Toronto finished 18th with a time of 78.31 seconds, while Diane Culver of Montreal came 27th in 80.38 and Carolyn Oughton of Calgary was 28th with a clocking of 80.84.

Diana Gibson of Toronto was among competitors disqualified for falling or missing a gate.

The Canadian girls fared well in a big field of 60 skiers from 12 countries, but all the glory belonged to Betsy. With her 25 points for first-place honors, she vaulted to third place in the early-season standings in the World Cup race, close behind the 29 points of leader Francoise Macchi of France and the 28 of Miss Steurer.



BETSY CLIFFORD

Russel Wins Giant Slalom

VAL D'ISERE, France (Reuter) — Patrick Russel of France won the men's giant slalom in the Criterium de la Premiere Neige World Cup ski competition here today.

Russel, 24, registered the best time in both legs of the event, clocking an unofficial total of two minutes 34.65 seconds.

His compatriot, world slalom champion Jean-Noel Augert, 21, was second with a combined time of 2:35.29. Italian Gustav Thoeni of Italy was third in 2:36.72 and Henri Duvillard of France fourth in 2:37.77.

The event was held in biting cold on a 1,300-metre course. The drop was 354 metres with 57 gates.

PELE VOTED BEST OF YEAR

LONDON (AP) — Pele, the Brazilian soccer star, was named Sportsman of 1970 Wednesday in an Associated Press poll of European sports writers. Heavyweight boxer Cassius Clay was the only American named, being picked eighth.

Eddy Merckx, a Belgian cyclist, was second and Chris Papanicolaou of Greece, the only man ever to vault 18 feet, was third. Tennis star Margaret Court of Australia was voted the top woman athlete.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Coming back to list of winners in Times' Bowler-of-the-Week contest after absence of two seasons is Stan Jones, who captured men's fivepin award in 10th week of eighth annual competition. Stan, who earned Bowler-of-the Year title in inaugural season, nailed down the weekly award and rolloff berth with 335-283-262—880 series in Foresters League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

SWISS SOCCER WIN

ATHENS (AP) — Switzerland beat Greece 1-0 Wednesday in a first-leg European Nations Championship Cup soccer game.

Japanese Girl Wins Fifth Gold Medal

BANGKOK (AP) — A 17-year-old Japanese girl swimmer, Yoshimi Nishigawa, became the first athlete ever to win five gold medals as Japan continued to dominate the Asian Games Wednesday.

With four days left in the sixth Asian games, Japan had 69 of the 115 gold medals awarded so far and appeared likely to take at least 75 of the 136 at stake in Asia's version of the Olympics.

The Japanese also had 44 silver medals and 17 bronze.

South Korea was second in the gold medal race with 13. Iran had nine gold, India six and Thailand and Israel five each.

Miss Nishigawa won her fifth gold medal with a record performance in the women's 400-metre individual medley. She was timed in 2:26.5, 12 full seconds better than the old mark.

Miss Nishigawa previously had set Games records in the 100 and 200 metre freestyle.

Decision Reserved

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Court of Appeal has reserved decision on a question posed by the province concerning the right to control the sale of eggs and poultry. The two-day hearing, which ended Wednesday, is the sequel to an unsuccessful attempt by the province to bring the whole issue of interprovincial trading before the Supreme Court of Canada.

★ ★ ★

Ultimatum Given

WINNIPEG (CP) — Motor Coach Industries Ltd. has threatened to leave Manitoba unless its 600 striking employees agree to a 21 per cent salary increase over three years.

"If the workers demands become prohibitive then it just might be necessary that we leave the province," said Harry Zoltok, manager of the Winnipeg bus-making company.

Motor Coach is a subsidiary of the Grehyound Corporation of Chicago.

Animals Dying

CALGARY (CP) — lack of space at the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has resulted in the premature death of more than 100 pets a month, SPCA officials said today.

"The Calgary building needs a 50-per-cent increase in space for the animals," Leon Neilsen, shelter director, said.

35th to Die

CALGARY (CP) — Kimberly Mann, 10, of Calgary died in hospital Wednesday from injuries she suffered after being hit by a car last Friday.

She became the city's 35th traffic fatality this year, one short of the 1969 mark.

Muzzling Charged

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta opposition leader Peter Lougheed said Wednesday the Social Credit government is muzzling civil servants in an attempt to hide "embarrassing facts" about the ecological effects of the W. A. C. Bennett dam in northern British Columbia.

NO SUCCESS resulted from two search operations today in Montreal. In one police and soldiers encircled a four-block area and conducted fruitless house-by-house searches for the kidnap-killers of Pierre Laporte. A Montreal newspaper quoted a police official as saying that two French-language radio stations knew police plans in advance and broadcast some information. (CP Wirephoto).

50 YEARS OF FAILURE

Aimless Billions Spent on Science

Lack of Guidance Rapped by Senate

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Billions of Canadian dollars were committed in the 1950s to nuclear power programs, jet fighters and ballistic missiles without one meeting of the federal cabinet's chief science policy-making body.

This is an example cited by the Senate science policy committee of past performance under what it describes as Canada's "science policy by accident."

In the first volume of its report tabled Thursday, the committee says the federal government must shed 50 years of failure at molding the national science effort and replace it with a clear, comprehensive policy aimed at economic and social objectives.

Faced with a huge international technological race and with growing social problems at home, politicians and the public can no longer afford to abdicate their responsibilities to make and control science policy, it says.

For example, Canada got into nuclear power and building jet fighters and missiles between 1950 and 1958 without the cabinet committee on scientific and industrial research, the main top-level policy body, ever meeting.

Committee Dissolved in October

Since 1958, the committee had met with growing frequency —once a week this year. The report adds that the cabinet committee was dissolved by the government in October, to make way for setting up new policymaking machinery next year.

The report makes specific citations in discussing costly weapons systems developed in the 1950s, culminating in the elimination of the Avro Arrow program in 1959.

There was the Avro flying saucer, for which no cost is specified, later developed as a subsonic experimental craft under U.S. contract; the abortive Velvet Glove missile costing $24 million; and the CF-100 jet interceptor, costing $146 million in federal funds before production.

Top cost, of course, was the $450 million sunk in the Arrow.

In view of the "gap at the top," says the Senate report, it is hard to see how a clear policy could result from the three policy advisory bodies—the National Research Council, the Science Council of Canada and the Economic Council of Canada.

The NRC was created in 1916, the economic council in 1961 and the science council in 1966.

NRC's Effectiveness Weakened

The study says NRC's effectiveness as an advisory agency was weakened seriously when it acquired huge laboratories in the 1930s and 1940s. It then faced a conflict of interest between offering advice and doing its own research.

The scienee council, it adds, has been working in a political vacuum with minimal impact on policy.

The Senate science policy committee, headed by Senator Maurice Lamontagne (L—Quebec), economist and former cabinet minister, was created in 1967. Its extensive hearings included trips to the U.S. and Europe.

Most of the specific recommendations will appear next year in a second report. One recommendation made by the first report calls for a permanent Senate committee to review major policy issues every five years and to study individual areas or problems when required.

While the 100,000-word report praises achievements and scientists of the last 50 years, it also says "the bulk of the evidence presented to the committee, including what came from the federal government sector, stressed the need for an over-all science policy."

The committee said the organization of science is the core of power in this generation, comparable with ownership of industry in the 19th

'Too Many Research Workers'

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is only three years away from producing nearly twice as many PhD research workers as there are jobs for them, says the Senate science policy committee.

The committee says there is "something fundamentally wrong with the scientific manpower situation in Canada."

"We are apparently producing undesirable surpluses in certain areas and tolerating serious gaps in others that are paralysing important research functions in government."

The report was tabled today.

Reporting on evidence from outside the government, the committee says there is evidence most holders of PhDs in science and engineering will have to find jobs in industry, either in Canada or abroad.

But it also cites evidence that industry sees too few engineers, geologists and geophysicists on the horizon.

INDUSTRY CONCERNED

And the committee says industry is concerned whether the training and attitudes of PhD graduates fits them for working in industry.

"Canadian industrialists are seriously concerned about the nature of Canada's university training."

Kidnapped Envoy Says He's Nervous

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher has sent a letter saying he is tired and nervous in guerrilla captivity and urging the government to accept his captors' demands.

The 57-year-old envoy, seized at gunpoint 11 days ago, made his appeal in a note found in a suburban bar here Wednesday along with the kidnappers.

The guerrillas reiterated their insistence on formal guarantees by the government that 70 political prisoners they want exchanged for the bachelor envoy would be flown to Chile or Algeria.

Britain Bound by 'Obligation' To Make Arms Sale—Heath

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath left little room for doubt Wednesday that Britain is disposed to honor its "obligation" to supply arms to South Africa.

But two points mentioned by Heath at a crowded news conference winding up his quickie visit here for talks with Prime Minister Trudeau suggested that the fateful decision — for the Commonwealth — will not necessarily have to be taken.

One was that South Africa has not yet applied to buy arms from Britain, though it has been several months since Heath's newly-elected government announced it was willing to consider applications.

The other was that Britain's commitment to South Africa under the Simonstown agreement could be dissolved only by mutual consent.

On both points, Heath appeared to leave open the possibility that South Africa itself will provide an out for Britain by not embarrassing it with a request for arms.

Heath visited Ottawa for part of a day on his way to Washington for talks with President Nixon today and Friday.

President Nixon and Heath settled down today to wide-ranging talks on East-West relations, NATO, the Far East and other issues.

At a formal welcoming ceremony at the White House, Heath touched on a key issue of the talks when he assured Nixon there is no incompatibility between Britain's application to join the European Common Market and Anglo-American relations.

On the contrary, he said, if Britain is admitted to the

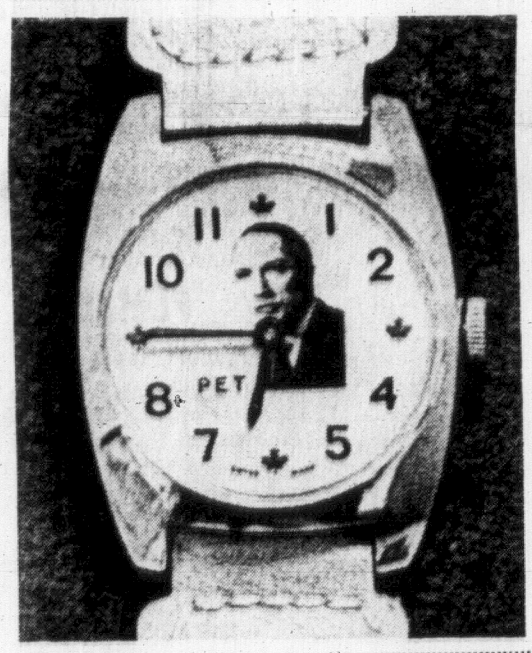
No Shares Yet

OTTAWA (CP) — Shares for public participation in Telesat Canada, putting up the country's first domestic space communications satellite, will be offered only after the satellite has achieved "successful commercial operation," it was announced today.



PM TICKS AND TOCKS

MONTREAL (CP) — Trudeau wrist watches, on sale in Montreal department stores for two weeks, are "selling splendidly," the Montreal distributor said Wednesday.

The timepiece is "not jazzy but a hell of a lot nicer," than the Spiro Agnew caricature watches sold in the United States, said a spokesman for Clef Canadian Industries.

The watch features a black-and-white photograph by Jean-Pierre Cucuel of the Prime Minister, not a caricature.

The $14.95 Swiss-made watch has red hands and a red maple leaf at each quarter hour.

Some 15,000 watches have been distributed throughout Eastern Canada and the company expects to put them on sale shortly in Western Canada, the spokesman said.

SIX PERSONS DEAD BY OFFICIAL COUNT

Strike Follows Polish Riots

WARSAW (CP) — Shipyard and other workers in Gdansk and miners in Silesia were reported on strike today after three days of riots and street fighting in Poland's Baltic ports over sharp price increases. The outbreaks were reported to have left at least six persons dead, by official count.

Other sources said the death toll was at least 12 and more than 150 persons were injured, many of them militiamen-police.

The Polish Communist party newspaper Trybuna Luda admitted for the first time that stiff pre-Christmas price increases in food, fuel and clothing announced last weekend were at the root of the trouble.

The paper, also making the first editorial comment in Poland on the clashes in Gdansk (formerly Danzig), Gdynia and Sopot said some of the workers who battled with militia still were not back at work. The paper urged them to return to their jobs.

The clashes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday left buildings burned out and stores looted, and led to tanks being brought on to the streets and a dusk-to-dawn curfew being clamped on the three coastal cities.

Observers said the Trybuna Luda article indicated that all was not yet well in Gdansk, although earlier Polish reports said calm and order had been restored there and in the neighboring port of Gdynia and the vacation resort of Sopot.

All three cities form an almost unbroken built-up complex stretching for about 15 miles along the Baltic coast, with a total population of more than 600,000.

Ottawa Boosts Soldier Guards

OTTAWA (CP)—The number of soldiers guarding political leaders has been increased in recent days in the national capital, officials disclosed today.

Reasons given was the belief that the Front de Liberation du Quebec might seek a "replacement hostage" for freed James Cross.

Most of the soldier-guards had been withdrawn in the Ottawa area.

But they have been returned to duty and persons who were without any guards for weeks now have them again, at least at night.

Pollution Measure Agreement Reached

WASHINGTON (WP) — House - Senate conferees reached final agreement Wednesday night on a clean air bill imposing an absolute legislative deadline of Jan. 1, 1976, for auto industry production of a virtually pollution-free engine.

The compromise measure, probably the strongest air pollution control bill ever considered by Congress, is expected to reach the House and possibly the Senate floor Friday for quick approval and transmittal to President Nixon.

House commerce committee chairman Harley Staggers (D—W. Va.) called the final provisions "a reasonable compromise."

Under the final provision, the industry must come up with an engine by Jan. 1, 1975 that will reduce emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons by 90 per cent from the maximum 1970 permissible levels. The administrator of the environmental protection agency (EPA) would be empowered to grant a one-year extension, but after that no new cars could be sold that didn't meet the new standards unless Congress extended the deadline.

MONTREAL CITIZENS UNAWARE

Police Help Was Nearby

MONTREAL (CP) — For 30 consecutive nights in November, residents of the west-end Cote des Neiges district were bothered by a noisy prowling gang of tough-looking men.

Already tense because of the kidnap crisis, apartment dwellers heard strangers tramping down usually quiet corridors at 2 a.m., grabbing door handles and trying to force them open.

Burly hobos sat on the front porches of duplexes for as long as two hours. In the middle of the night, men would jump back-yard fences and try to force locks on doors.

Sergeant Andre Querton, in charge of the crime prevention section in the district, said Wednesday that not one citizen reported the incidents to police.

"People are so damned unresponsive, and coldly so, that it's unbelievable," he said. "They did absolutely nothing."

The hobos and prowlers were undercover officers conducting a survey to test residents' response to prowling incidents.
